'Mad bomber' blasts police

VANCOUVER (CP) — A projectile was fired through the front door of city police headquarters early today and exploded in a hail of metal fragments.

No one was hurt and there was no damage, but soon after the blast, a man telephoned, identified himself as the Mad Bomber, and said: "That's just a sample of what you can expect to get in October."

Police S.Sgt. Don Paradon said the significance of the reference to October was not apparent.

Forensic scientists collected the remains of the bomb, which Paradon said hurtled through the open door with a "loud whooshing noise" at 1:10 a.m.

"There was a tail of fire behind it," Paradon said, "which indicates it was a projectile, rather than something thrown."

Seven police officers and a civilian at the front desk dove for cover. The device went off in a sheet of flame and smoke, and there was a strong smell of gunpowder.

In addition to the jagged pieces of metal scattered around the office, police were analysing a chalky material found on the floor.

Pay fines . . . or else

Gov't getting tough with those who default

The provincial government — out as much as $10 million because thousands of court fines aren't paid — is about to get tough with offenders.

The crackdown will see the government use a computer and tracing service to nail what are known as "scofflaws", the people who simply ignore court orders or who skip without paying.

Government sources say the problem has existed unchecked for six years, with some officials estimating the amount owed Victoria could be as high as $10 million — most of it in small amounts of from $35 to $450.

The measures will deal with fines for motor vehicles violations or hunting offences, but not municipal offences such as parking violations.

Senior government officials say the situation dates to 1974 when the then NDP government amended the Summary Convictions Act and removed judges' powers to impose jail sentences in non-criminal cases for persons who defaulted on a court-imposed fine.

Since then an estimated 20 per cent of the 50,000 people fined each year have failed to pay their fines. Civil action against a person who doesn't pay is time-consuming, expensive and cumbersome.

Officials in the court services branch of the attorney-general's ministry say they have lists in the more than 80 regional offices and now are making a master sheet of all who owe money.

One senior official said the crackdown will cover everyone.

"We are not going to let anyone off," he said, adding there is no statute of limitations on outstanding fines.

Under the crackdown, the court services division has started a tracing service in Vancouver that will track down and collect from those who have failed to pay.

The official explained that with the default system removed, there are four options open to the government for collecting the fines.

The government can garnishee wages, bring the individual back before a judge, execute against an individual's goods or register a lien if the party owns land.

"We only decide to write off the fine as a loss after extremely careful consideration and when it is obviously apparent that we can never collect."

Attorney-General Allan Williams said collecting the fines is an extremely difficult problem but must be done otherwise the court procedure becomes meaningless.

"There is not much point in escalating fines if no steps are taken to recover them," he said.

TOKYO (AP) — A Soviet nuclear submarine caught fire in international waters off Okinawa today and at least nine crew members were killed and three injured, the Japanese Maritime Safety Agency reported.

It warned ships and aircraft to stay clear of the area because of possible radioactive contamination, but first reports, from a patrol plane dispatched to the scene 70 nautical miles east of Okinawa, said no sign of radiation was found.

The fire occurred just before dawn. The submarine had radioed for help but the crew apparently was able to get the situation under control fairly quickly.

As the damaged submarine lay virtually dead in the water, in calm seas, a Soviet ship arrived in response to an earlier call for assistance. The vessel, identified as the training ship Meridian, took about 20 crew members off the sub.

GDANSK — Authorities arrested 16 leading dissidents in a crackdown aimed at ending Poland's mass strike, but the labor ferment was reported spreading as the nation's worst crisis in 10 years entered its second week.

Nearly every factory in this central Baltic coast region was shut today and there were major disruptions in Szczecin, a port and industrial city of 400,000 on the East German border.

Far south in Pope John Paul II's hometown of Krakow, 24 departments of the Lenin Steel Plant were were reported struck.

(The Pope, breaking his silence on the labor unrest troubling his Polish homeland, told Vatican pilgrims Wednesday: "We here in Rome are united with our fellow Poles."

(And Roman Catholic Bishop Lech Kaczmarczyk of Gdansk has sent medals bearing the Pope's image to each of the 15 members of the strike committee presidium, or executive board.)

Several factories and the urban transport system were also reported shut down in Elbarg, about 64 kilometres east of Gdansk, and dissident sources reported a strike against a liquefied national gas transportation facility in the city of Lomza in north-eastern Poland.

There were also reports that Warsaw, the nation's capital, may be hit with a general walkout.

Some 150,000 workers were off the job in the Gdansk area and 30,000 in Szczecin.

In Chicago, Thomas Gleason, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, said Wednesday his union's 110,000 dockworkers will launch a countrywide boycott of Polish goods today or Friday in support of the Polish workers.

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Everything was going well at the construction site of the Lutheran Brotherhood's 17-storey office building in Minneapolis until an errant computer in New York served up 12,056 glass windows — all the wrong size.

Three sides of the $30 million office building are to be covered with the copper-toned glass panes. But not those that were shipped by Pittsburgh Plate Glass.

Each of the newly arrived glass panels is 3 inches too long. And, because they are made from a tempered mold, they cannot be cut, officials said.

Frank Pallilo, whose Glen Cove, N.Y., manufacturing firm subcontracted for the glass work and manufactured the frames, said the windows will have to be scrapped and new panels will have to be made in Pittsburgh.

A spokesman for Lutheran Brotherhood, a fraternal insurance society, said he presumes Pittsburgh Plate Glass will have to pay for the miscalculation. He does not know how much the error cost.

"Everything was coming in pretty well," he said. "We're waiting to find out what's going to happen."

He blamed the foul-up on a computer error.

Appeal court ruling backs law society advertising ban

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Law Society of B.C. may prohibit advertising by lawyers and discipline those who ignore its rulings, B.C. Court of Appeal ruled Wednesday.

In a unanimous decision, the court overturned earlier B.C. Supreme Court rulings which held that law society benchers were wrong in disciplining North Vancouver lawyer Don Jabour, who advertised a legal clinic in January, 1978.

The discipline committee recommended a six-month suspension for Jabour but the suspension was held in abeyance pending outcome of the appeal.

Jabour also challenged the society's advertising ban on grounds it was contrary to the federal Combines Investigation Act, which prohibits restraint of competition, and that it violated the fundamental right to freedom of speech.

In reasons written by Appeal Court Justice Peter Seaton, and concurred with by Justices J. D. Lambert and H. E. Hutcheon, it was held Wednesday that the benchers — governing body of the B.C. Law Society — have the power to prohibit the type of advertising Jabour was using and to discipline members for such advertising.

The earlier B.C. Supreme Court ruling held that the benchers were authorized to regulate advertising but not prohibit it. But Mr. Justice Seaton said he could see nothing in the Legal Professions Act to justify this conclusion.

Soon after Jabour challenged the advertising rules, the combines investigation branch began an inquiry in which it was suggested the law society had committed a criminal offence under Section 32 of the Combines Investigation Act by agreeing or arranging to lessen competition unduly in the supply of legal services.

Seaton said he was not convinced Parliament intended the act to cover governing bodies of professions.

"I reject the concept that to perform an act which the legislature is empowered to authorize, and has authorized, has been made a crime."

Regarding Jabour's claim that his freedom of speech was being violated, Seaton said the speech concerned is commercial advertising, and the question was: Has the legislature validly bestowed on the benchers the power to ban that type of speech while there is a presumption in the Bill of Rights unlimiting freedom of speech?

"I think it has," the judge said, noting free speech is qualified by laws such as those against defamation.

Tanker hits oil rig

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A 172-metre tanker carrying more than 2.5 million gallons of oil and gas slammed into a towering drilling rig under construction in the Gulf of Mexico today and burst into flames.

Texaco Oil Co. said the cargo was on fire, and the U.S. Coast Guard said there was a possibility the ship would explode.

More than five hours after the fire began, the coast guard said the fire was spreading.

"The intensity of the fire on the ship has increased. Flames are shooting up 50 to 70 metres," said Coast Guard spokesman Tom Pearson.

"The possibility of an explosion has increased since the cargo appears to have caught fire . . . The helicopter says the fire has gone from the bow back to amidships. She is burning to the water line," he said.

All 39 crew members were rescued from the ship by an oilfield barge passing nearby in the water, which is dotted with rigs and platforms.

Help line abuse to be studied

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy has defended the actions of her ministry in an investigation into an alleged case of child abuse which turned out to be without foundation.

The minister, however, said she has requested her senior officials to investigate the possibility of amending legislation so that persons wrongly accused of child abuse may have some legal protection.

The request came after the Times published a story Monday about a Victoria-area couple — identified only by the pseudonym Smith — who claimed they were subjected to a lengthy and embarrassing investigation after someone reported they were abusing their two children.

McCarthy said in the legislature Tuesday there were adequate grounds for carrying out the investigation.

And she defended the social worker's actions.

The minister said social workers assigned to such cases are selected for their experience, ability and discretion.

The minister said it is imperative to check out all reports of abuse and cited a tragic case a couple of years ago of a child in New Westminster who died as a result of abusive treatment.

McCarthy said the complainant in the Smith's case did leave a name and that gave the report an even greater credibility.

The Help Line for Children which the province set up last fall, the first of its kind in Canada, was created to prevent incidents like the one in New Westminster, from ever happening again, McCarthy said.

She said persons reporting abuse may remain anonymous.

"We don't insist on getting names because if we did we may not get a real child abuse call."

She said the name of the informant can never be released because all reports are strictly confidential.

McCarthy said she was deeply concerned about the press article and said she feared it might lead the

NDP wants Eckhardt probe

Attorney-General Allan Williams is in jeopardy of losing his credibility and should establish a judicial inquiry into allegations surrounding the Eckardt report on B.C. electoral boundaries, NDP leader Dave Barrett said Wednesday.

Barrett, who called for emergency debate on the matter in the house, said there is no doubt that either the attorney-general was misled or is misreading the information in front of him.

Speaker Walter Davidson ruled against Barrett's motion on technical grounds.

A report to Williams three weeks ago by deputy attorney-general Dick Vogel cleared deputy premier Grace McCarthy of allegations she interfered in the drafting of former judge Larry Eckardt's 1978 report on electoral boundaries which added a pocket of Social Credit support to the Mrs. McCarthy's Vancouver-Little Mountain riding.

The investigation was started after commission secretary Florence Tamoto said in an affidavit that commission counsel Susan Thompson told her Mrs. McCarthy interfered in the commission's work. Thompson denied the allegation.

This latest effort by the NDP for a full public inquiry followed a newspaper article in which Vi Barton, a former Eckart commission staff member, said she felt she was being made out to be a liar.

Barton's evidence — contained in a transcript of her interview with a member of the attorney-general's staff — indicated she too was told by Thompson that "Grace McCarthy got to Judge Eckardt."

That and other points raised by Barton about drafting of the electoral boundaries report, including an allegation that Dan Campbell, a former adviser to Premier Bill Bennett, instructed a commission member to fly to Victoria from Vancouver and pick up a brown enve

Premiers' parley opens with bickering

WINNIPEG (CP) — The 10 premiers, some of them sniping at Ontario's William Davis, began two days of discussion today on the constitution and economic issues.

Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed arrived here Wednesday night, grumbling that Davis's close alignment with the federal government will prevent the premiers from forming a common front when they meet Prime Minister Trudeau next month to debate the constitution.

New Brunswick Premier Richard Hatfield appeared to agree.

"Well, there's no doubt about it that Ontario is supporting the interests of the federal government and vice versa," Hatfield told reporters as he entered the Manitoba legislature to begin the talks.

"That is an historic position that Ontario has taken. They took that position in 1867."

Davis, however, tried to play down the spoiler image other premiers attributed to him.

Davis did not openly criticize Lougheed during discussions with reporters but as the Ontario premier outlined his position on various issues it was clear that he and his Alberta counterpart are miles apart.

For example, Davis said he found "nothing offensive" with the federal government's $6 million advertising campaign to drum up support on constitutional change. Lougheed and some other premiers have harshly criticized the ads and are discussing fighting back with counter-campaigns to explain provincial positions.

The ministerial talks are to end next week in Ottawa. The hard-bargaining will then be done by Trudeau and the premiers Sept. 8-12.

The talks have been hamstrung by a federal demand that a new constitution give Ottawa the power to regulate the flow of goods, capital and labor across provincial boundaries.

Most provinces — Ontario being an important exception — oppose the federal position. The Western provinces fear Ottawa would use such a power to grab control of oil and natural gas.

Jean Chretien, federal justice minister and the other co chairman of the ministerial talks, announced Wednesday in Ottawa that he is willing to soften the federal proposal.

"It has been suggested that the federal government is engaged in a massive power grab. This is simply not the case and such comments completely misrepresent our proposal. Therefore, I will change the wording of our draft to make this explicit, so as to eliminate the fears of certain provinces," Chretien said.

This semantic tinkering is designed to clarify two points:

—The federal government has no intention of interfering with provincial programs which favor certain areas or citizens and discriminate against other regions within a province. It wishes only to guarantee that non-residents are not subjected to extra kinds of discrimination.

—The federal government will leave the provinces all the elbow room they need to decide priorities and regulate their economies as they choose. It is only when non-residents are excluded from participation in a provincial economy that the federal government will step in. This is a power Ottawa has had under the existing constitution for more than a century.

Billy's cronies probed for drugs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two individuals close to Billy Carter — one his financial consultant and another a friend — are being investigated by a federal grand jury for alleged involvement in marijuana and cocaine smuggling, it was revealed today. (For earlier story on investigation see page 44).

Senate investigators disclosed the grand jury investigation during a public hearing dealing with Billy Carter's Libyan ties, but stressed the probe is not focusing on the president's brother and there is no information that he is involved in illegal drugs.

Phillip Tone, the special prosecutor hired by the Senate committee investigating Carter's Libyan connection, startled a public hearing — and apparently Billy Carter — by going public with the normally secret details of a federal grand jury investigation.

Tone said the Justice Department had "advised us it had no objection" to the disclosure of the grand jury investigation of George Belluomini and Ronald Sprague, both of Bakersfield, Calif., "and others" for the alleged importation of marijuana and cocaine into the United States.

Sprague, a financial consultant to Belluomini, testified before the Senate committee on Wednesday and at that time described Belluomini as a "very, very close friend'" of Billy Carter.

Sprague said because of Belluomini's relationship with Billy Carter, he was asked to go to Libya last March to help negotiate a $500,000 loan from the Libyans to the president's brother and a potential multimillion-dollar oil agreement.

Billy Carter smiled when Tone stressed he was not involved in the investigation and said the news came as "a complete shock to me."

Asked specifically whether he had heard any conversations or observed any events that led him to believe either Belluomini or Sprague were involved in drug importation, Carter replied, "No sir, I did not."

Electrical worker revolt could spark blackouts

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Los Angeles faces the possibility of "rolling blackouts" since striking electrical workers pulled the plug on about 40 per cent of the electrical power to the nation's third largest city.

Members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, defying a court order banning their walkout, shut down several of the city's generating units Wednesday and ignored threats they would be jailed for contempt of court.

The department of water and power, the largest municipally-owned utility in the U.S., serving nearly 3 million residents, said it did not expect blackouts today. But a predicted rise in temperature or malfunctioning equipment could change all that.

The utility also was asking its 2.8 million residential and industrial customers to conserve electricity, but if more power is cut out of the system a series of "rolling blackouts" would be the next response. Outages of two to five hours would be rotated around the city and DWP said they would try to give customers as much notice as possible.

The city attorney's office tried to serve court papers on key union members, ordering them back to work or face the stiffest penalties available, including jail terms, for defying the court order.

the weather

Patches of cloud will drift across B.C. today but a ridge of high pressure will ensure that in many areas sunshine will prevail. A frontal system from the Pacific will however spread cloud and some precipitation to the north coast on Friday. This development does not bode too well for the weekend. Present indications beyond Friday point to cloud and showers spreading eastward and southward across B.C.

3 days adrift, Canadians safe

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP) — A U.S. Coast Guard cutter rescued five Canadians on Wednesday after their vessel had drifted for three days in the Pacific Ocean about 225 kilometres west of here.

The Yocona took the 11-metre sailing vessel Countless Hours in tow at 9 a.m. PDT.

The coast guard said Lawrence Singleton, Wilma Elliott, Kenneth Miller, and Teresa Gowel, all of Vancouver, were safe aboard the cutter. Also rescued was Robert Gordon of Port Coquitlam.

Ensign Rob Parker said seas were two to three metres and winds were 40 to 50 kilometres at the time of the rescue.

The sailing vessel had been adrift after it had blown out all its sails and its auxiliary motor had broken down, the coast guard said.

The Yocona was expected to arrive in Astoria with the Vancouver-based vessel in tow today.

Alcan ordered to cut Nechako flow

VANCOUVER (CP) — Water flow in the Nechako River has been reduced on the orders of the federal fisheries department, which earlier went to court to get the flow increased.

The Nechako flow rate, which is controlled by the Aluminum Co. of Canada, was chopped Aug. 15 to 500 cubic feet a second from the 8,000 cfs. demanded in July by Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc, company officials said Wednesday.

The 500 cfs flow rate was ordered by federal fisheries officials, Alcan spokesman Les Holyrod said. "We were surprised. We expected the (flow) rates to stay at 8,000 (cfs.) until Aug. 20 (Wednesday)."

Fisheries officials successfully argued in B.C. Supreme Court earlier this month that high flow rates were needed until Aug. 20 to protect spawning salmon. The hearing followed a month-long confrontation between LeBlanc and Alcan over control of water levels in the river.

Fisheries experts told Mr. Justice Thomas Berger the 8,000 cfs rate was required until at least Aug. 20 to lower river temperatures and raise water levels to protect spawning salmon.

Alcan argued the higher rate was unnecessary and insisted a lower rates was needed to provide hydroelectric power at its Kitimat smelter.

Fisheries official Forbes Boyd said the new low rate is not a reversal of policy by the federal government. "It (the court battle) was about river management and that is what we are doing, in conjunction with Alcan."

Higher levels had been needed to lower water temperatures in the Nechako system and increase water levels in some tributaries. Flow levels will be maintained this fall and winter at 1,100 cfs., he said. The 500 cfs. level is a short-term correction designed to bring river levels down to the 1,100 level.

Residents stop Hydro spraying

NELSON (CP) — B.C. Hydro removed its herbicide spray truck from a southern Interior community Wednesday, but says it will return to apply Tordon 101 and Tordon 10-K to clear foliage along power line rights-of-way near Fauquier.

John Sexton, spokesman for the Crown utility, said residents of Fauquier and Edgewood, about 40 kilometres north of Castlegar in the West Kootenays, received adequate notification of the proposed spraying.

About 40 demonstrators blocked the truck Tuesday at Fauquier, saying Hydro hadn't notified the public but Sexton said newspaper notices were in newspapers that reached the community.

Objectors fear the herbicide, which contains picloram and 2,4-D, will contaminate drinking water and have toxic effects on cattle grazing on power line rights-of-way.

Meanwhile, Mount Currie Indian Band will ask B.C. Supreme Court to set aside a permit granted B.C. Hydro to spray the herbicide Tordan 10K on a transmission line right-of-way for brush control.

Smith open on teacher pensions

Education Minister Brian Smith said Wednesday he is prepared to discuss pension problems with B.C. teachers in an effort to avert a strike this fall.

The president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation indicated Tuesday — following legislative approval of a bill limiting increases in teachers' pensions — that some form of job action will be discussed at a conference of local presidents this week.

Bill 29 removes automatic quarterly indexing of teachers' pensions to the cost of living starting next year. Under it, teachers would pay an extra half per cent of salary to cover a $550-million gap that has grown over the years between long-term pension benefit commitments and the funds to meet them.

Government contributions are scheduled to rise by just over two per cent.

Interior growers seek control

VERNON (CP) — The new B.C. Vegetable Marketing Commission is not meeting the needs of Interior producers, a local industry spokesman said Wednesday.

Ben Hove, an Interior commissioner on the new board, said main issue is the right of the Interior producers to form local groups to market produce.

Interior and coast boards amalgamated earlier this year.

Hove said coast members oppose creation of sub-agencies because they feel they will lose control.

Policeman to stand trial

SURREY (CP) — A 22-year veteran of the Delta police force was committed for trial Wednesday on a charge of obstructing justice.

Inspector Robert Allison was committed after a preliminary hearing in provincial court.

The charge stems from an incident in which attempts were made to halt the prosecution of a relative on a drinking-driving offence.

Sewage upgrading urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — A technical advisory panel to the Pollution Control Board has recommended that secondary treatment costing many millions of dollars be implemented at three Fraser River estuary sewage treatment plants.

The panel suggests that secondary treatment be introduced as soon as possible at the Iona plant and at an unspecified future date at the Annacis and Lulu Island plants.

The panel also concludes that the Iona plant is not meeting municipal pollution control objectives and is so overloaded that raw sewage sometimes bypasses the plant and escapes into Sturgeon Bank.

The Greater Vancouver Sewerage and Drainage District, which operates all three plants claims secondary treatment at Iona would cost at least $26 million in capital expenditure and an extra $1.5 million a year in operating costs.

More intestinal infection

NELSON (CP) — Another outbreak of a new intestinal infection has been reported, this time at a church camp near Red Deer, Alta.

Dr. Harry Pagan, Kootenay health district director who recently reported cases of campylobacter at Nakusp and Nelson in southeastern British Columbia, said the Alberta camp manager phoned him when he read of the Nakusp case.

The bacteria can cause vomiting, diarrhea and severe dehydration.

Work stoppage ruled illegal

VANCOUVER (CP) — A work stoppage by 188 B.C. Telephone workers in the Fraser Valley was ruled illegal by the Canada Labor Relations Board at Ottawa on Wednesday and the workers have been ordered to return to work.

The dispute, which saw Telecommunication Workers Union members walk off the job in the company's lower Fraser Valley district July 28, centred on seniority rights.

The dispute began when two cable splicers were suspended.

EVERY IMPRESSION SAYS THEY SHOULD COST MORE.

The styling is tight and concise. And everything fits into place." That's the immediate thing you notice when you first see an Accord Hatchback or Sedan. And upon closer inspection that impression grows. The finish is refined. The detailing is impeccable. These are no run-of-the-mill imports, or mass-produced domestics, these are finely crafted automobiles in the truest sense of the word. That's your first impression, and that impression says they should cost more.

Inside, the impression continues. The detailing and finishing inside are as impeccable as they are outside. The fully reclining bucket seats are contoured and comfortable. There's a remote control to open the trunk or hatchback. The Sedan has a remote control to operate the rear door locks. There's even a coin box on the dash for parking change. From the driver's point of view, they're driver's cars. With everything falling immediately to hand. And to eye, with a tachometer, speedometer and the other necessary lights and gauges to tell you what's happening, when.

From the passenger's point of view, they're passenger cars. With cloth faced seats for winter warmth. A heating and ventilation system that distributes warm or cool air evenly throughout the car. And a standard AM/FM sound system.

Once again, those impressions say the cars should cost more. Next comes the 'raison d'etre', driving an Accord. The 5-speed transmission (or the optional Hondamatic with overdrive), the 1.6 litre OHC engine, the front wheel drive, the rack and pinion steering and the fully independent suspension all add up to a driving experience that has to be experienced.

These are the impressions that you get from an Accord Hatchback or Sedan. But they could lead you to a false conclusion, that the cars cost more than they actually do. If you compare an Accord to an equally equipped domestic you'll find it's priced quite low. And compared to most European imports you'll find the Accords priced surprisingly low.

Maggie still best bet

Visitors Information Centre president Les Wood said this week he would like to see the B.C. government build an entirely new ship for the Victoria-Seattle run.

The ship, he said, should be especially designed for the four-hour crossing, should be speedy, and should be able to hold 3,000 passengers with a seat for each.

It's an appealing idea. A ship seating 3,000 would be able to take care of expansion of the Seattle tourist trade for years to come. A ship speedier than those sailing on past runs would make scheduling easier. And a ship specially designed for the run would be able to incorporate attractions for tourists coming to Victoria.

Practically, however, the proposal may present some problems.

A ship with seating for 3,000 must be quite large, if the passengers are not to be jammed in like cattle. The extra size might lead to difficulties finding a suitable spot in the Inner Harbor for berthing the vessel. The smaller Princess of Victoria this year has to be wary of tides in the harbor for berthing, and this problem would be compounded by an increase in size.

The special design would be difficult. In the past, suggestions have been made to build a virtual replica of the Princess Marguerite, but regulations governing the construction of new passenger ships would make this virtually impossible. A requirement for the use of all fireproof materials would mean a heavy emphasis on chrome and formica, rather than classic wood and panelling.

Last but not least is the question of expense. New ship construction is notoriously expensive, as Science Minister Pat McGeer remarks regularly. A ship with the features Wood desires would doubtless be more expensive than most. The price might well turn out to be more than the government could afford.

Wood fears that the Princess Marguerite (capacity 1,800) would soon prove too small if she were brought out of the retirement. However, supplemented with three jetfoil runs a day, she could serve the market for quite a few years yet.

If engineering studies prove she could be made safe and more efficient, she is probably still the best bet for 1981 — and probably for many years after. Many renovations could be made for the amount Wood is looking at spending for an entirely new ship.

String for the tourist bow

Developer Sam Bawlf appeared before city council's zoning committee this week to urge that his condominium-cum-hotel development on the harbor be considered a proper use under existing zoning.

Bawlf is concerned that council is planning to change its zoning so that buildings in which suites are rented out by the week or month will be considered hotels or some variety of same, rather than normal residential buildings. This would make Bawlf's project now under construction a non-conforming use, a problem for the 50 investors who have already bought suites in it.

Bawlf makes some good points. He states that the concept of time-share accommodation, utilizing both self-owned and rental suites, is growing rapidly in resorts around the world. Many travellers who stay a week or more in one location are preferring to pay for a full apartment suite complete with kitchen rather than for a regular hotel room.

Some, who return to the same location year after year, prefer to buy a share of a condominium, the share based on the proportion of the year they wish to occupy the unit. Others, who travel to various locations, prefer to rent on a weekly or monthly basis.

This is a concept that could work well for Victoria. Time-share arrangements could appeal to many who come to Victoria only for a few weeks in the winter. It would be another string on the tourist industry bow.

City council should not rush in to approve Bawlf's project or any other time-share ones, however. City staff and the Advisory Planning Commission should first undertake detailed studies to see what parts of the city would be appropriate for either rental or ownership projects, what problems might arise, and what regulations might be needed.

Bawlf is obviously in a hurry to receive a favorable decision because of the large number of small investors involved in the project. To a degree, he has only himself to blame, however.

Had he informed city council when he first proposed the project that he was planning a rental time-share scheme, the studies would probably be completed by now and council would be prepared to make a decision.

Council, however, was left with the impression for months that Bawlf was building a regular condominium project. Only at the eleventh hour did he make the details of the rental plan public.

His request should stimulate council to start studying time-share plans but not to begin approving them willy-nilly.

WAYNE KING

A dying Fisherman's Wharf

SAN FRANCISCO — Thirty-five-year-old Pat Flanagan, a part owner of Standard Fisheries on Fisherman's Wharf, has been in the fishing business since he was eight years old and hosing down the floors for his father.

In that time, he has seen the wharf turn from a busy seaman's haunt to a tourist attraction, and he fears for the area's future.

"You look at the wharf now," he said, gesturing aimlessly toward the street outside as workers shifted about cartons of rockfish, sole, cod and crab in the warehouse on a quiet alley just off the street. "It's all restaurants, a lot bankrupt."

"If you allow people," he observed with a shake of his head, "they'll put a bar on every corner. We've allowed a lot of Disneyland activity, forgetting what made Fisherman's Wharf in the first place — fishing."

New malls attract restaurants, tourists, not fishermen.

Breakwater needed

Over the years, commercial fishermen on the wharf have urged a breakwater to calm the bobbing waters that make expansion of their operations in the harbor impossible. Instead, they have seen expansion of the tourist industry — more restaurants, gift shops, street vendors and musicians passing the hat.

Back on the street, the gray gulls still cry, the sea smells borne on the breezes off the bay still mingle happily with those of the Dungeness crabs the street vendors sell, and together they chase away the ghosts of burnt pretzels that haunt the sidewalk along the wharf. But the feel today is more Atlantic City than Martha's Vineyard.

Restaurants abound — restrooms for "Buoys" and "Gulls" — tour buses navigate the crowded streets, and vendors and street hawkers far outnumber fishermen. A San Francisco photographer who now visits the area only infrequently observed drily that "what they're fishing for down here is tourists."

At United Shellfish, one of the half-dozen purveyors of seafood that still have their own boats, Paul Alioto, who is related in some unspecified manner to former Mayor Joseph L. Alioto ("we're a big clan"), filleted a codfish with deft precision and sighed with disdain.

"It started in the '50s," he said, "and they've made a circus out of it, a circus out of the wharf."

Along the street, the shops purvey everything from Gucci luggage to T-shirts, belt buckles and bumper stickers bearing such legends as "I'd Rather be High," "Superstud" and "Sex Maniac at the Wheel."

A jewelry shop sells oysters, pearl guaranteed, for $5.95.

There is a wax museum, a Ripley's Believe It or Not Museum and a museum of Guinness World Records ("Compare yourself to the World's Fattest Man," "See the World's Largest Guitar") and next door, the Enchanted World, a miniature cable car ride "into San Francisco's historic past."

The Wharf, says a promotional brochure, is "the crowning jewel of all San Francisco's scenic charms."

Down the street, a black mime in whiteface paws at an imaginary wall, a man in a gorilla suit plays a trumpet and another in orange boots and yellow slicker, called "the Doll," stands motionless as a statue for hours. Another manages to play two horns at once, occasionally on key.

"Draw ya pitchah, mistah?" implores a street artist.

San Francisco's Port Commission has attempted to expand commercial fishing by setting aside a 400,000-square-foot pier in the wharf area exclusively for handling and processing fish. Two sheds on the pier, Pier 45, are now used for processing, according to a Port Commission spokesman, and two others for "happenings," such as a San Francisco Energy Fair.

Sloppy market

The project has been deferred indefinitely, however, the commission citing downturns in the industry.

Fishermen agree that the industry is cautious right now. "A year ago 17 per cent of the cost of catching the fish was fuel, now it's 40 per cent," Flanagan said. "We've got sloppy market conditions." But he maintains that the city has not helped.

"We can't get proper berthing facilities," he said. "We've been talking about a breakwater for 15 years. We're cramped. We don't have good security. There are no bathing facilities for workers. Nobody cares."

"We even had to fight for a long-term city lease. You get the feeling they'd rather have a restaurant. We can't afford to pay as much rent."

Polish crisis touches nerve

The explosive situation in Poland could have the gravest consequences for overall East-West relations if it gets out of hand.

Any direct Soviet military intervention to reassert Communist control of the country's disgruntled striking workers would have a far more devastating effect on U.S.-Soviet relations than did last winter's Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. And if there were Soviet intervention, Polish resistance almost certainly would be more widespread than when Soviet troops intervened once before — in 1956 at the time of the first of the Polish workers' post-World War II outbreaks of dissidence.

Uniquely sensitive

Every party to the current crisis is aware of these facts — and of the likelihood that Moscow would move if direct intervention seemed the only way to preserve the Communist government in Poland and Poland's loyalty to the Soviet-run Warsaw Pact alliance.

The Soviet leadership's sensitivity to developments in Poland is unique because of the latter's geographical situation as the only buffer between the Soviet border and the two Germanys, and therefore astride the main Soviet communications and supply routes to the line of superpower confrontation in Europe.

Yet the likely embarrassing consequences for the Soviet Union of military action in Poland presumably are having a constraining effect on the Kremlin. The Soviet leadership still is interested in an eventual strategic arms control treaty with the United States. And next month it faces in Madrid the conference that is to monitor implementation of the accords reached at the 1975 Helsinki Conference on European Security.

Significantly, both the U.S. and Soviet governments have until now avoided any comment likely to exacerbate the tensions in Poland. So, too, has the Vatican — where a Polish pope presides. The Vatican, in one sense, has as direct an interest in the crisis as has the Kremlin because of the strength of Poland's Roman Catholic church. Indeed, the Roman Catholic church is the only national organization recognized within Poland outside the overall umbrella of the Communist Party.

Another outside party with a vital interest in a resolution of the Polish crisis without major explosion is West Germany. Poland plays a key role in the West German ostpolitik launched by former Chancellor Willy Brandt and pursued by his successor, Helmut Schmidt. Polish leader Edward Gierek was to have met Schmidt in Hamburg this week, but Gierek canceled the trip at the last minute because of the crisis on his hands at home.

But there was some comfort for Gierek from West Germany last week. A group of 25 West German banks agreed on a $675 million loan to Poland, less than the Polish government wanted, but more than it had expected to get. An additional Eurodollar credit of about $325 million to Poland was due to be signed in London this week, with the Bank of America the most prominent of the contributors to the total advance.

Every little bit will help Gierek. At the end of last year, Poland had a greater hard-currency indebtedness to the West ($19.4 million) than did the Soviet Union itself ($16 million). There are rumors that the Soviet Union lent Poland $1 billion in hard currency earlier this year. If Moscow did do this, it shows a Kremlin sensitivity to the need to help Gierek with his problems.

These problems have an economic genesis. It was a rise in meat prices July 1 that started the round of trouble that has escalated ever since. But as the workers pressed their grievances on a widening front, political demands were added to those for economic relief.

Carrot and stick

Gierek's response has been the traditional carrot and stick — initially more carrot than stick, pay increases for first one striking group and then another. Now, to the political demands, he is responding with more stick than carrot.

If he is to survive without Soviet intervention, he needs to keep the economic demands separated from the political and to get the workers in the last resort to accept the separation. He still has leeway, albeit at heavy cost to Poland's economy, to move toward satisfying the economic demands. Satisfaction of the political demands without undermining the Communist system is an altogether different question.

The Sunday Times of London quoted a strike leader in the Gdansk shipyard as saying at the weekend: "We feel that we could bring the present regime to its knees, but all we want is for our justified demands to be met."

Over the years, as additional electric services have been added to our buildings, the number of hydro meters has increased, until we now have 13 meters. This has never presented any problem until recently, when B.C. Hydro started adding transit levies to the invoices. As a result, we are now receiving 13 transit levies every billing period.

If we paid these invoices, we would be paying 13 times more tax than our business neighbors with only one meter. It is grossly unfair to expect any business to pay 13 times as much tax as similar businesses with only one meter. We will be happy to pay our fair share of the transit levy when a just method, equal to all corporate citizens, has been devised. Until then, we will continue to withhold payment of this levy.

A spokesman at the minister of municipal affairs office advised me that they had "merely passed the legislation" allowing the transit levy. The Capital Regional District's answer to the problem was: "give us your name and address and the nature of the problem." A mimeographed letter from a member of B.C. Hydro staff took the position that Hydro is merely collecting the levy. The letter warned that if the levy isn't paid the account will be shown in arrears.

It's indeed unfortunate that somewhere in this web of bungling bureaucracy, someone doesn't have the intelligence and guts to admit that the present method of collecting the transit levy is wrong. And, rather than continue to compound the problem by ignoring it, implement a fair and speedy solution. — B. A. Savage, 364 Goldstream Avenue.

High price

Recently, many inmates of Canadian prisons — aided and abetted by "prisoner rights activists" — went on a one day hunger strike to show their displeasure over the unpleasantness of being behind bars.

Prisons are definitely not the nicest homes people can reside in. Yet, if the men or women in prison had not murdered, or raped, or robbed, etc., their displeasure would be unnecessary. To put it bluntly, if a person gets caught breaking the law, that person must be prepared to pay the price, and without any soppy whining. There is nothing more ridiculous than a cry-baby criminal.

One other note, how many of those "prisoner rights activists" run around the country weeping and squawking for the victims whom the poor criminals have ripped off and ripped up? — J. Wickstrom, 3264 Shelley Street.

Only one voice

In response to the article which appeared in the Times of Aug. 12 titled "Study Urges Crackdown on Welfare:"

The report by Roy Johnson seems to single out lone parents on income assistance for criticism. I think this is an unfair attack on a group of people who are struggling to bring up their children to be responsible, healthy members of our society. They carry a workload that is normally shared by two adults.

The single parent must see to it that an adequate income is coming in to support the family, and that the homemaking chores such as shopping, cooking and cleaning are done, as well as making sure the emotional, social and physical needs of their children are met. This is an enormous load for one adult who may also be adjusting to a drastic drop in their standard of living and struggling to recover from the grief and pain of a broken marriage.

There are practical issues the report does not seem to take into account. Many single parents who choose to go to work outside the home cannot find good day care, especially for children under three and over five.

If we care about our children, we must care about their parents and support them in their work to bring up healthy children in every way we can. I work at the Single Parent Resource Centre and I know many people in our community and at the ministry of human resources do support and care about single parents. This report, although it reflects a prejudice that exists and a direction the government could take, is only one of many voices within the ministry and not the major one. — Peggy Faulds, 408-430 Michigan Street.

Polite riders

I travel on the Douglas bus No. 930 frequently between 2 and 4 p.m. I am always impressed by the politeness of the students attending the English course at Camosun College, Carey Road. Most of the students are new immigrants so therefore are new to Victoria and Canada. They are mostly immigrants from Laos. They always give their seats to the elderly passengers and convey an air of great courtesy. It's a pleasure to welcome these people to our beautiful city and I'm very proud to have them here and I'm sure we all wish them well in their new life. — Margaret Fear, 3861 Savannah Avenue.

A hospital boat?

Greater Victoria suffers from two seasonal problems, to wit, overfull hospital beds in winter, and overburdening of the ferry system in the summer. Both are inconvenient to the consumer.

A possible solution would be the purchase of an extra ferry which could be equipped as a hospital ship in the winter months and moored in the Inner Harbor.

Significantly fewer people get sick or want elective operations in the summer months, so it could then be used as a normal ferry on the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen run.

More expensive than a fixed link? Too simple? — Richard S. Lurie, M.D., Department of Anesthesia, Victoria General Hospital.

A tribute to Nicky, a special teenager

By JAMES CAMERON
Manchester Guardian

Until a few days ago I had an uncommonly good friend, just about a quarter my age. He was called Nicky, and we got on remarkably well, considering he was only 16 when he died last week, and I am a bit older.

Whenever we met, we argued on wholly equal terms about the affairs of the world, about which he cared at his age perhaps more than I do at mine. The world for Nicky was something that needed to be put right, as soon as he got the hang of how.

I mention this just because these days it is the done thing to shoot down the teenagers for their selfish and careless frivolity. Maybe I have done that myself in my time; I shall no longer.

Vivacious

Several years ago they diagnosed a cerebral condition that was terminal, or so they said. Nicky would have none of that stuff. He not only survived but also vanquished it. You would have thought he almost scorned it, because from then on he engaged himself most cheerfully in learning and reading and studying the antics of the society he was to inhabit for such a short time. Proper young junior wrangler was Nicky.

All the things our lot, the journalists, wrote about as though everything were to be measured in column inches — as everything is — he took seriously, or at least carefully. Even as a small vivacious boy, he took politics to heart. That is unfair; not politics; he just in his merry way felt part of the human condition, which contains much to enjoy, but also a hell of a lot to question.

When there was time from his schoolwork, or indeed his games, he got down to considerations like confrontation, refugees, nationalism, deprivation, injustices — all the things we think teenagers reject. Probably most do.

He sometimes exasperated his thoughtless grown-ups by talking far too much about things of which children are not supposed to care — like apartheid and racism and disarmament. He argued even then that if he, young Nicky, did not care, nobody else would.

Nobody listened enough, except sometimes I did. As far as I was able, I egged him on. That was how I got to know him then, and why I sorrow for him now.

As a schoolboy he was sufficiently curious about something — I have forgotten what — to write to the president of the United States requesting some sort of explanation of whatever it was. The president was discourteous enough not to reply, but it was hard to discourage Nicky. He wrote, at intervals, to Margaret Thatcher, to secretaries of state. He wrote to Field Marshal Auchinleck, who was and is a family friend, albeit just eight decades older.

Some came off and some didn't; the determined young inquisitor realized that you can't win them all. So he would sit down and write some more.

"What do you think," said Nicky to me quite recently, "can anyone ever change anything?"

I said: "I've been trying for a damn long time, and I never brought anything off, but you may."

"Why?" said he, "because I'm younger?"

"Yes. And I dare say brighter. Anyone's brighter than me."

"Not anyone," said Nicky. "Probably quite a few."

In retrospect I think his parents know that he felt he had so much to say because he had so little time in which to say it. We may be thinking in hindsight, but I do not believe Nicky thought that way. Strange that a 16-year-old should leave concerned not about his future but about ours.

'Save a place'

He brought more verve and care into his 16 years than most of us do in thrice that time. I shall never again sell teenagers short, anyhow.

This little boy — as I first knew him; and young man as he came to be — was full of zest and love of life, and he enjoyed the things kids enjoy, and he wrote to Washington because he had something to say to the president of the United States.

Sometimes he telephoned me to ask what on earth I meant by something I had written, and really wanted to know. Unless you are in this crazy business, you cannot imagine what sort of reward this is.

That is why I am writing this total irrelevancy today, forgetful of a hundred things of greater importance, because one vigorous and questioning life has been untimely quenched, and no one will ever know why.

Now you are in heaven, Nicky, give 'em hell.

Save a place for me.

The view from Moscow

By JONATHAN STEELE
Manchester Guardian

Afghan rebels in the hills . . . like Northern Ireland?

MOSCOW — In the West the talk is of "Russia's Vietnam," a morass, a quagmire, and a propaganda disaster, from which Moscow will only emerge — it seems to be hoped — in profound humiliation. Speak, though, to unofficial Russians here, either those in the unpolitical mainstream or critical members of the intelligentsia who condemn the invasion, and another analogy begins to come to mind.

"It's a wild country with wild people," said an unorthodox artist, who lives on the verge of official persecution. "It's far away. What happens there doesn't affect us here."

"Our soldiers will be there for a long time. They were slow to decide to send them in, and they will be slow to decide to pull them out," his wife chips in.

"Even when it was a monarchy, I always felt Afghanistan was a satellite, almost like Tadzhikistan. It was completely in the Soviet orbit," explained Vasily Aksyonov, one of the country's best writers who is now about to emigrate. He opposes the invasion, but it seems to leave him untouched.

Among Russians who support the official line there is a similar lack of emotion about Afghanistan. "We were asked to help. We had to go in," a student claimed, making it sound like a painful duty.

In both camps, for or against the invasion, there is agreement on one thing. The present level of Soviet involvement is not going to produce domestic revulsion. "We will stay as long as necessary," said the student. "The number of deaths is too small and too spaced out in this huge country to have any political effect," said the artist.

If analogies are needed for the domestic impact of the war, then Afghanistan sounds more like Russia's Ulster. Russians talk about it as the English talk about Northern Ireland — only rarely. It's a geographical neighbor yet psychologically remote. A strange unruly part of an otherwise placid community, "ours" yet not really part of us, a tedious battleground with no end in sight, but bearable because the deathrate is, and probably will remain, low.

Twelve years ago when the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies marched into Czechoslovakia, the invasion caused a tremendous upheaval among Moscow's intelligentsia. Had there been the same reaction this time? I asked my artist friend. We were sitting in his studio, one of those amazing worlds within a world which are dotted round Moscow in the most unexpected places. It is full of works which can never be publicly exhibited.

"Afghanistan was wrong and stupid. It was a mistake. Czechoslovakia was a tragedy. We knew the Czech reformers. They visited us, the writers, the journalists, the artists. Czechoslovakia was a symbol of hope for the intelligentsia here, for all of us. Then it was crushed. But Afghanistan is quite a different thing. It's not a democratic country. Our Central Asia is much more advanced, and Babrak Karmal is probably more progressive than what is happening in Iran.

"Besides, it is far off. We can only see it in terms of interest. Was the intervention a good idea or wasn't it? The human side of it is too distant for us here."

Of course, the Soviet authorities keep it deliberately that way. Although the press is eternally full of justifications for the intervention, there is hardly ever a mention of any Soviet casualties. Nor does the press, except on very rare occasions, focus on individual acts of heroism or show pictures of identifiable soldiers. Brezhnev does not publicly award decorations for bravery, or visit the front, or console bereaved families. When they fight or when they die, the Red Army is composed of faceless men.

The Russian contingent in Afghanistan is slightly over 80,000 men, according to Western sources. (The Kremlin gives no figures.) This is only a sixth of the American numbers at their peak in Vietnam, and equivalent in comparative population terms to 16,000 British troops in Ulster.

The Americans assert that about 6,000 have been killed. Some reporters claim to have picked up rumors of political dissatisfaction when the coffins come back from Afghanistan. But grief is obviously to be expected. In the Soviet Union's vast and closed society the number of deaths would have to reach enormous proportions for the cumulative grief to have any effect, and even then it is not clear which way it would go.

An establishment which still cannot permit open discussion of the millions who died in the purges is hardly likely to be shaken by the much lower casualty figures in Afghanistan, as one dissident reminded me.

It was a wet Sunday afternoon when I drove out to Peredelkino, the village outside Moscow where many Soviet writers have their dachas. Although the weather was all too English, the scene was totally different. The Russian concept of good view is not a long expanse of rolling country reaching into the distance, but the sight of tall trees, close together, and right up against the house. Vasily Aksyonov's dacha has no lawn, only a tangle of weeds, tall grass and undergrowth. Hidden in the forest, a party was already in swing round a well-spread table while the birch trees dripped remorselessly outside the open window.

Aksyonov believes the main reason the Soviet Union went into Afghanistan was the leadership's "ideological mystique". "They have the idea that no revolution can be allowed to be reversible. They have a duty to save it. But it was amazing how the Kremlin could act against its own interests. By intervening militarily, they've provoked civil war on their doorstep, lost Russian lives, and ruined detente."

Would the invasion have the same effect on the young generation as Czechoslovakia had had on young intellectuals in 1968? He did not know, but he thought that if it did, it would not be an ideological shock as 1968 was. It would be a shock to people's concept of state power. People would wonder what had happened to Soviet might, that the authorities had had to send in so many troops and that a so-called counter-revolution would set in inside an allied country.

One of the young intellectuals deeply moved by the invasion of Czechoslovakia was Pavel Litvinov, grandson of Stalin's longest-serving foreign minister. He and six others held a protest demonstration in Red Square on August 25, 1968. It was in a sense the start of the modern civil rights movement. His punishment was exile to a Siberian village near the Manchurian border.

A year after his return to Moscow in 1972, he was arrested on the eve of another demonstration and advised to leave the country. "Go west — or east, again, young man," they told him in effect. He now lives near New York.

Friends of his in Moscow doubt whether the Afghan invasion will have any impact on young Russians. Unlike those who were brought up in the 1960s in the days of Khrushchev and immediately afterwards when there was talk of a thaw, the present generation is mainly consumer-orientated. It wants things. It wants goods. It accepts the official line on Afghanistan. One friend says she has heard that Soviet soldiers were told, and believed, that if they had not gone into Afghanistan first, the Americans would have come in, and turned it into an anti-Soviet base.

I spy with my little armpit

DENNIS BLOODWORTH
London Observer

The Chinese are making a film called Believe It Or Not about the mind-bending accomplishments of children who can see through their fingers, their feet, or their ears — or even their armpits.

Too frivolous and heretical to rate an inch of type in Peking's ponderous newspapers during the dull days of the Gang of Four, extrasensory perception first evoked comment last year, when a 12-year-old student in Ichuan shyly demonstrated that he could read through the back of his ears.

So far it has been found that at least 50 people in China, most of them children, possess the strange ability the West has called "skin-vision."

Earlier this year 14 young sensitives were subjected to rigorous "public trials" in Shanghai under the skeptical scrutiny of scientists, and scored spectacular hits almost every time.

Even the smallest tot could run her fingers over a picture concealed in a cloth sleeve and exclaim: "Yellow bananas painted on a green background."

Most tests have since been carried out, and the most spectacular performers to date have been the Wang sisters, who can read not only cards placed under their own armpits, but under each other's as well.

Western parapsychologists point out that, when it is not fraud, skin-vision must be a form of telepathy (the child reads the mind of the person who wrote the card), or clairvoyance (the child's mind perceives the card itself).

The skin cannot see.

That does not make it less eerie. But until recently orthodox Maoists went further. Their attitude towards the whole misty field of ESP was that it was pernicious bourgeois superstition invented to delude the struggling masses, and, in the past, a sanctimonious Peking predictably lashed out at the Russian "revisionists" for experimenting with this "unscientific nonsense."

That verdict, pulled out of thin air like much Maoist dogma, has been "reversed" by the pragmatists now in power, who teach that theories must be tested in practice, and a good Communist must always "seek truth from facts." Parapsychological research is therefore no longer counter-revolutionary.

And there could be more to it than academic interest. The Russians also began by regarding the whole business of ESP as ideologically impious, and in 1956 the Soviet Encyclopedia defined telepathy as "anti-social, idealistic fiction." But by 1961, earlier, somewhat furtive experiment had led to the establishment of a state-supported laboratory in Leningrad, and a symposium had shown that in scientific circles believers matched skeptics, man for man.

Like the Chinese, the Russians had discovered a teenage girl named Rosa Kulasheva who could apparently see through her fingertips, and they were soon to light upon Nina Kulagina, who could move objects, just by looking at them (and tell colors with her eyes closed).

The possibilities of this kind of knack were evidently not overlooked, and three years ago a dissident Soviet physicist reported that the Russians were secretly investigating the military applications of parapsychology. The Chinese ostensibly scoffed at the Soviet experiments by caricaturing the supposed results, which, they warned, not only enabled Russian doctors to diagnose from a distance, and Russian teachers to teach without opening their mouths, but Russian spies to "photograph military installations of other countries by mere visualization."

The derision sounded a trifle shrill, but the no-man's-land of knowledge is a neurotic place. The Russians themselves had become suddenly more interested in ESP when they heard that the Americans had conducted a successful experiment in long-range telepathy with the submarine Nautilus.

The Americans denied that there had been any such experiment, but they in turn were appalled when a New Yorker of peculiar gifts was able to describe in detail a Franco-Russian meteorological station in the Indian Ocean, simply from a set of map co-ordinates.

Russia has its Kulaginas, the West its Uri Gellers, an Australian drives hooded through a congested Kuala Lumpur, and a blind-folded Japanese girl cycles happily through the traffic of downtown Tokoyo.

Now the modernizers of post-Mao China are out to prove that no one has an edge on Peking for long. They already claim to have their own Abominable Snowman, their own American Big Foot, and their own Loch Ness monster. And now the all-seeing armpit — believe it or not.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Investor enthusiasm for oil, high-technology and precious metals issues continued to overshadow concerns over rising interest rates and pushed the stock market higher for the second straight day.

The gains followed Wednesday's 5.46-point recovery from a near-27-point loss earlier in the week amid interest-rate worries sparked by a record weekly money supply gain.

The worries returned today, however, after dealers began speculating that the Federal Reserve Board was starting a credit-tightening maneuver.

Phillips Petroleum led the NYSE most-actives, up ½ to $40¾, while Mobil was ahead ⅜ to $72⅜ and Tesoro Petroleum was up 2⅜ to $30. Texaco, which announced an oil find in the German North Sea, was off ⅛ to $37⅛.

Domestic oil producers have gained ground following reports Saudi Arabia is considering an oil production cutback.

Computer issues were higher, continuing Wednesday's strong gains. International Business Machines rose ¼ to $67⅛ and Texas Instruments climbed 1¾ to $121¾.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market was firm at the close of quiet trading.

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 497.9, up 6.2.

Equities and golds advanced.

Canadian shares firmed.

Toyota, Datsun set sales records

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's two largest automobile manufacturers, Toyota Motor Co. and Nissan Motor Co., said today their July production set records.

Company officials attributed the increases mainly to continued surges in domestic demand and rising sales in the U.S. and in European markets.

Toyota's vehicle production in the month was 317,923 units, up 14 per cent from last July and 8.5 per cent higher than June's level. Its previous record for production was set last April at 301,409 units.

Toyota exported 161,735 units, up 39 per cent from last July and up 1.4 per cent from June. Exports to the U.S. rose nearly 19 per cent to 60,935 units. This is almost three per cent lower than June's exports to the U.S.

Nissan Motor, producer of Datsun models, said its production in July came to 257,943 units, up 39 per cent from the year-earlier month.

Camosun staff take strike vote

Non-teaching staff at Camosun College have reaffirmed their rejection of a contract offer and are going ahead with a strike vote today, says union spokesman Pete Driedger.

He said earlier this week that negotiators for Local 2081 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees would meet with college board representatives to get an explanation of a proposed cost-of-living-adjustment clause (COLA).

If that explanation was satisfactory a confrontation could possibly be avoided, Driedger said.

However, the meeting was held and the employees Wednesday again rejected the board's offer.

If today's strike vote is carried, mediator Peter Dowding will be asked to withdraw, allowing the 155 support staff to walk off the job.

The employees' contract expired March 31. The board has offered a 9.5-per-cent increase in each year of a two-year agreement plus a COLA clause. The union is demanding a one-year pact with a 12-per-cent hike retroactive to April 1 and another three-per-cent increase Oct. 1.

College board chairman Janet Baird held out hope earlier this week that the dispute would be settled by renewed negotiations or some form of mediation-arbitration.

Driedger said today, however, the board has not been in contact with the union about resuming talks.

creased meat prices, free trade unions and other political reforms.

Most Western European newspapers, speculating about the possibility of Soviet intervention to help defend Poland's beleaguered Communist regime, are predicting the Polish unrest will have vast repercussions for Moscow and the rest of the Soviet bloc.

Invasion rumors buzzed louder Wednesday when it was learned Soviet authorities have resumed jamming Russian-language broadcasts to the Soviet Union by the Voice of America, the British Broadcasting Corp. and the West German station, Deutsche Welle — a technique used by the Soviets during periods of tension such as the Kremlin's invasion of Czechoslovakia 12 years ago this month.

The government of the Communist — but overwhelmingly Roman Catholic — nation sought to use the church to halt the eight-day walkout by broadcasting a week-old message from the Poland's leading prelate, Cardinal Stefan Wyzynski, on television.

In its tougher step, however, police swooped down on the Warsaw headquarters of the Committee for Social Self-Defence, the best-known Polish dissident group, and arrested 15 of its members, dissident sources said. A 16th member of the committee was detained later at his own apartment. The raid was at the home of the committee's spokesman, Jake Kuron.

Deputy Premier Tadeusz Pyka was dropped as chairman of a government commission which had been negotiating with workers in an effort to end the strike, the state radio reported today.

The state radio broadcast said Pyka was replaced by first Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Jagielski, who was dispatched by the government to end a walkout in Lublin last month.

The commission had been seeking to negotiate with individual strike committees rather than a central organization.

Pyka's removal appeared to indicate the commission's strategy of undermining worker unity was failing.

lope that was delivered to Eckardt, were not contained in Vogel's report.

Williams said a careful examination was made into all factors arising out of Tamoto's declaration and all factors which were uncovered during interviews with other people.

"I examined statements taken by the people who have had knowledge of these matters and I find Mr. Vogel's report does state the matter correctly," he said.

Williams said the only question he will investigate further is the point raised by Barton and later in the house by Gary Lauk (NDP — Vancouver-Centre) that oaths of secrecy signed by commission members were taken after commission hearings and backdated.

Barton also has called for a public inquiry, saying she wants to get "everything out in the open, all cleared up once and for all."

Lauk said he too is disturbed that the credibility of Barton and Tamoto has been questioned: "What possible reason could they have for lying."

Barrett said Williams has become part of a cover-up and that every single matter in his department now becomes suspect.

"The only decent, honorable thing left to do is for the attorney-general to call a judicial public inquiry. It has nothing to do with politicians any more, nothing to do with differences of opinion or philosophy — this is a matter of the system being trusted itself."

Meanwhile, Mrs. McCarthy, who has emphatically denied tampering with the Eckardt report, said she has sought legal advice in connection with the allegations.

Asked about possible legal action against commission members, the minister said: "It hasn't escaped my mind."

McCarthy defends Help line

public into erroneous conclusions about the Help Line program

The Smiths claimed a social worker visited their house, spent 1½ hours interviewing them and asked the two Smith children to take off their clothes, except undergarments so she could examine their bodies.

McCarthy conceded victims of flagrantly malicious calls have no recourse and for that reason has asked her officials to look into the legislation to see if an amendment is warranted that would give such persons some protection.

She was ambivalent about the need for legislative change, however.

If it precluded someone from phoning in a report, she would never agree to it, she said.

The Help Line reported last December that 36.5 per cent of all calls made during the month were crank calls. The number dropped to 28 per cent in January and 24 per cent in February.

The minister said the Help Line also has received numerous calls from persons who are not so much reporting abuse as they are reaching out for help for a wide range of family and social problems.

Because the Zenith hotline has been so widely advertised the public tends to use it before considering approaching other sources for help.

McCarthy achnowledged records are kept on all reports of abuse, even those which are not substantiated.

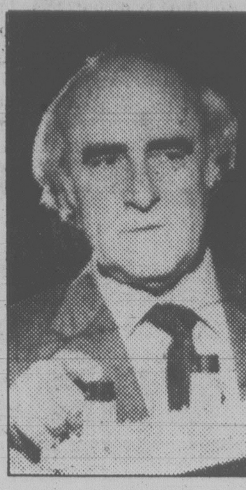
How the news broke in London



GRIMM
. . . put up a million

Port Moody technologists whooped it up when word came of historic 'find'

Night of April 14, 1912 . . . what remains two miles down?

Titanic team had B.C. rooters

By AB KENT

A group of B.C. technologists had special reason to knock off early and head for the pub last Friday when Texas oil magnate Jack Grimm said he'd located the 68-year-old wreck of the Titanic.

Employees of International Submarine Engineering Ltd. of Port Moody were ecstatic, said president Jim McFarlane, whose firm built the underwater scanning device used by the Grimm expedition 600 km off Newfoundland.

"It's a high point in a person's life to be associated with such an historic event."

Although there is some uncertainty about whether the target located by ISE's sonar equipment is really the ill-fated White Star liner, the Grimm expedition aboard the research ship H.J.W. Fay believes the outline shown by telemetry is what they were looking for.

Storms and low fuel reserves cancelled the search before photographic confirmation could be obtained.

McFarlane explained that when a target is located the data must be classified.

"The only way you can classify it absolutely is to see it.

"They haven't been in communication (with us) yet other than to say they have a target."

But his company expects the next phase of the program — after a rest period — will be to plan work for next year.

"There will be an expedition in 1981 to photograph the Titanic," he said.

ISE would develop a remote-controlled submarine vehicle to carry cameras inside the hulk lying in about 3,600 metres of water.

"It would be very risky to try to get in the ship with a manned vehicle," McFarlane said.

"The possibility has been discussed of taking the Hughes Aluminat (a manned deep-diving submarine) to 15,000 feet, then flying a remote vehicle down from there."

ISE began development of remote-controlled submarine vehicles about five years ago when the use of integrated electronic circuits became feasible. Involved mainly with offshore petroleum work, the company is still growing and has begun developing equipment for submarine mining exploration, such as the ocean floor at 18,000 feet off Hawaii.

A London-based group wanting to search for the Titanic was the first to contact ISE in 1979, but lacked financing to organize an expedition.

Grimm, of Grimm Oil in Abilene, Tex., entered the picture this spring and put up $1 million for his own project, involving scientists and technologists.

ISE devised a towed sonar system, built partly in Port Moody and partly at a subsidiary, International Submarine Technology of Seattle.

In operation, the sonar vehicle is attached to a line secured to a heavy weight depressor which is towed by 15,000 feet of cable behind the research ship.

The vehicle consists of an open lattice aluminum frame about seven feet long, four feet wide and 3½ feet high. Fixed to this are a drogue anchor and sonar transducer boxes containing the electronics to send out sound pulses in a swath 5 km wide.

The pulses come back to the boxes after being reflected from irregularities on the sea bottom and are re-transmitted to surface recording equipment by means of a coaxial cable.

The recording gear shows a profile on paper tape.

Word soon on ferry - Wright

By AL FORREST

The provincial government should be able to meet the suggested deadline of Sept. 15 to select a new vessel for the Victoria-Seattle run, Ald. Bob Wright said today.

A director of B.C. Steamship Co., which will operate the ship, Wright has been given the task of recommending a replacement for the Victoria Princess, which in turn replaced the Marguerite.

"The recommendation will be in the hands of the minister (Alex Fraser) soon."

Visitors Information Centre president Les Wood said Wednesday that unless a replacement is announced by mid-September, Victoria will lose package tour business for the second consecutive year.

Wood said travel agents work about nine months ahead putting together package tours to various destinations. If they don't know what vessel will be used and when it will run, they can't fit Victoria into their programs.

However Wright said he believes the decision could be made as late as the first week in November without impairing the city's tourist industry.

"Perhaps he is rushing us just a bit with the Sept. 15th deadline. But regardless of that, we all agree it is important to make an announcement as quickly as possible.

"We have been making a careful study of all available vessels over the summer and we are close to a decision now."

He said he is confident the government's selection will be welcomed by the community.

The Victoria Princess — formerly called the Queen of Prince Rupert — will be taken off the Seattle run in September.

It will go north for service between the Queen Charlotte Islands and Prince Rupert in October.

Wright said he agrees with Wood that Victoria's tourist revenues have greatly improved during the previous two weeks.

Woman injures leg

A 21-year-old woman passenger was treated at hospital for a leg injury and facial cuts after a motorcycle on which she was riding collided with a car in the 4100-block Cedar Hill Road Wednesday night.

Jacqueline Bradbury, 1086 Lodge, was later released from Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The operator of the bike, Bertram Buxton, 4516 Hughes, escaped injury in the 10:14 p.m. mishap.

Both were wearing helmets.

Police said Buxton was heading south on Cedar Hill when in collision with the car driven by Robert Langton.

Langton, who was not hurt, was turning into the driveway of his home at 4160 Cedar Hill.

Two streets to close

Two streets will soon be closed to relieve traffic congestion on Cook Street.

The Rise will be closed at the Cook Street intersection and Vista Heights will become a dead-end street at its eastern approach to Cook.

The closures were endorsed today by city council's public works committee.

Committee chairman Ald. Robin Blencoe said residents had been canvassed and the response was favorable.

The closures will be part of a general improvement of traffic conditions on Cook between Hillside and Kiwanis Way, involving street-widening and the construction of sidewalks and a left-turn lane for southbound traffic turning on to Hillside.

Policing bills to force cuts in civic programs: Mann

By DEREK SIDENIUS

The existence of separate police forces in Greater Victoria is "a luxury we can no longer afford," Ald. Larry Mann of Esquimalt said today.

He urged the four core municipalities to enter discussions that would lead to the creation of a single metropolitan police force.

Mann said in an interview soaring police costs — inspectors by 1981 will be paid $45,000 annually — are placing a heavy burden on municipal budgets and felt the situation can only get worse.

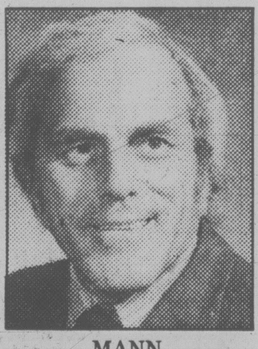
"The way I see it, it is going to get tougher in the future for the municipalities to manage. Other things are going to suffer to pay the policing bills."

That is sure to result in cutbacks that could affect a wide range of municipal programs from street improvements to recreation, he said.

"I think it is going to apply everywhere."

The alternative, he suggested, would be massive tax hikes or injection of funds from the provincial government for local policing as recommended by the B.C. Police Commission's task force study on policing costs.

Mann called the recent police union wage settlement with Esquimalt, Oak Bay and Victoria police departments a costly one.



MANN
. . . pushes metro force

For Esquimalt alone it means a $100,000 increase to the police budget in 1980. The actual costs could be five times that amount if the members of the force continue their dual police-fire function. The members get a seven-per-cent pay bonus for doing both jobs.

Mann noted that by 1981 a first-class constable with 10 years experience will be earning more than $28,000 a year.

But Mann is more concerned about what the settlement has done to the salaries of higher paid officers who will receive the same proportionate increase.

By 1981, he noted, a police inspector will earn $45,000 a year and a sergeant, $35,000.

Mann said the settlement pointed out a disproportionate number of officers to other ranks in Greater Victoria.

"There are too many chiefs and not enough indians," he said.

Greater Victoria's ratio of one sergeant to three constables is more than triple Vancouver's ratio and quadruple New Westminster's.

In Vancouver there is one commissioned officer (inspector rank and up) to 27 men; in Greater Victoria, one officer to 16.

Mann said if the same ratio was applied here, 48 more officers would be back on the beat and the municipalities would save $400,000 a year in salaries and wages.

He said the Greater Victoria municipalities should follow the lead of municipalities in the Lower Mainland where talks have started on amalgamating police forces.

Beer talks spark hope

Exploratory talks between the two sides in the beer dispute were expected to begin today giving a glimmer of hope to parched B.C. beer drinkers.

Those hopes could be dashed if an ad hoc group of disgruntled independent hotel and pub owners successfully pickets the province's liquor stores and liquor outlets.

Provincial mediator Ken Albertini was to speak this morning at the labor ministry offices in Burnaby with negotiators for the Brewery Workers' Union and the three main breweries.

Eric Harris, spokesman for the breweries which locked out about 1,500 workers last month, stressed the session will be exploratory only, and that face-to-face negotiations are not scheduled.

"There are no meetings scheduled between the two parties," Harris said. "The purpose of the meetings is to determine whether or not there is any basis of settlement based on the union's position."

The two sides are only five cents apart in wage negotiations, with the union demanding an hourly increase of $1.05 and the breweries offering a flat $1 increase.

Major stumbling block seems to be the breweries' insistence on a three-year contract, while the union doesn't want to go beyond two years without further protection against inflation.

Meanwhile, Ted Tidball, spokesman for pub operators, warned Wednesday his group will "take whatever action we have to in obtaining a supply (of beer)."

His group is being forced to shorten hours — or close up — and lay off workers because of the beer shortage.

"Hotel, restaurant and bartender union members are not a part of this dispute, yet they lose their salaries and benefits because of the Brewery Workers' Union action," Tidball said. "We have no contract with the brewery workers, why then are we being used as pawns by the brewery works?"

"We could set up information pickets at all government liquor stores and warehouses."

Pickets could further outrage the drinking public, putting pressure on Labor Minister Jack Heinrich to intervene in the dispute.

B.C. Government Employees Union members who work in liquor stores and warehouses have been told not to consider possible information pickets as legal pickets and therefore to work normally, BCGEU spokesman Robbie Robinson said.

However, it would still be up to the individual worker to decide whether to cross a picket line, legal or illegal.

Tidball said Heinrich has a responsibility and an obligation to intervene in the brewery dispute but our requests for him to do so have gone unheeded."

City does bit ($200 worth) for unity drive

The cause of Canadian unity got a $200 boost today from Victoria city council's finance committee.

Ald. Robin Blencoe said council should approve the grant to the organizers of the People to People Petition to protect Canada from those who would break it up for monetary reasons.

"Quite frankly, it's very funny but for years Rene Levesque has taken the brunt of attacks from the public for breaking up the country," Blencoe said.

"Now they're doing the same here, but I wonder if their intentions are honorable," he added.

Western Canada's battle with Ottawa which might easily result in the breakup of confederation, Blencoe said, was based solely on monetary considerations and lust for power.

The committee was informed that the petition organizers had paid $500 of the $1,000 they owed the city for a trip to Quebec by Mayor Bill Tindall last May to take part in the presentation of the petition to the people of Quebec.

Before the judge

A 20-year-old city man was described by Judge Blake Allan in provincial court Wednesday as "a pretty regular actor on this stage."

"I can't believe you can be enjoying forever being in trouble," the judge told Glen Ferreira who was being tried for theft when he changed his plea to guilty.

Ferreira stole some hubcaps on April 18 about four months after he had been released on parole on a September, 1979, conviction. He has a criminal record dating back to December, 1972.

"You deserve a jail sentence so I'm going to impose one," said Allan, sentencing him to four months to be served after any current sentence.

A 45-year-old man with a record back to 1954 received an eight-month sentence to be served concurrently with a term ending in December, 1981.

Paul Morrice Mowatt pleaded guilty to possession of stolen property valued at more than $200 in connection with the theft June 4 of a $350 camera from a King George Terrace home.

Mowatt was on parole at the time of the offence, having been released in February from William Head prison.

A 19-year-old Brandon woman received a conditional discharge plus three months probation after pleading guilty to attempted theft.

Tracey Ann Davidson and a companion were observed Monday taking a $125 tent from the sporting goods section of a retail store and leaving it in the shoe department. They were caught before the tent was taken outside.

Defence lawyer Suzanne Paterson said Davidson and her friend arrived in Victoria two weeks ago to find apartments too costly so were living in a one-person leaky tent at a local campground.

Judge Harold Alder asked whether they had gone to social agencies for assistance in finding accommodation.

Davidson told him they considered going on welfare but had got jobs instead.

Robert Powell Donnelly, 30, of no fixed address, will appear again Wendesday to elect method of trial on a charge of breaking into the James Bay Safeway on the weekend

Fined on drinking-driving charges: Dalton Burt, 18, of 1939 Maple, $400; Stephen Rask, 24, of Humpback Road, $400; Anthony Younker, 22, of Fishermen's Wharf, $400; Kenneth Kirkley, 50, of Ottawa, $400.

Helmet law rematch

VANCOUVER (CP) — The lawyer who won a court battle against B.C.'s former compulsory motorcycle helmet law plans to go back to court to challenge the new one.

Jim McNeney says the Motorcycle Protective Association of B.C. will go back to the courts, but he doesn't know when.

Transport Minister Alex Fraser, who has introduced an amendment to the Motor Vehicle Act to make helmet use mandatory, said he hoped it would be law by Aug. 28.

The amendment, which the NDP will support, will change a section of the act that a provincial court judge ruled last week does not give the superintendent of motor vehicles authority to make regulations requiring use of helmets.

The motorcycle association isn't opposed to helmets but wants a safe design, McNeney said. He said those now available are only tested at seven kilometres an hour.

Computer software taxable

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that computer programs and a data bank were tangible assets on which a company must pay four-per-cent social service tax amounting to more than $13,000.

Justice Victor Dryer dismissed an appeal by Chequecheck Services Ltd., doing business as Telecheque Canada, against a decision of the B.C. finance minister which imposed the tax on purchase price of so-called computer "software" for $327,991.

The software included application programs and the bank of data purchased by the company from Laurentide Financial Corp. which had carried on a business of advising merchants whether to accept cheques tendered by customers.

The computer had an operating program including a bank of data as to what cheques had been honored or dishonored by customers in the past.

The company argued the software was not tangible and therefore not taxable. But Dryer said the company bought a business, including a computer into which had been introduced the operating programs. He said value of the computer was its value as charged.

He said a cassette containing a tape on which a symphony has been recorded is taxed at its whole value, not just on the value of the cassette with a blank tape.

Has Sittler been invited . . or not?

HAMILTON (CP) — Invitations to Toronto Maple Leafs' training camp have been sent out, but the National Hockey League club won't say whether one went to star centre Darryl Sittler.

Leafs owner Harold Ballard is adamant that Sittler, highest scorer in the team's history, will never again wear the blue and white Toronto uniform.

"I honestly don't know if we have invited him, but I think I could stop him from coming," said Ballard. "I don't want him because his action (in removing the captain's C from his sweater) was treasonous.

"I don't need anybody in my organization that is definitely opposed to management. I don't blame Sittler entirely — most of it is Eagleson's doing — but I think it would be better for both parties if he weren't here."

Allan Eagleson is Sittler's agent.

The invitations to training camp, which starts Monday, Sept. 15, were sent out by Punch Imlach, director of hockey operations for the Maple Leafs.

However, he isn't getting involved in the fight between the owner and the star.

"I have nothing to say on that matter and we are not releasing the list of names of players that have been invited to training camp."

Ballard said that he made a stab at unloading Sittler last week when he called Nelson Skalbania, owner of Calgary Flames, and offered Sittler for Kent Nilsson and Bob MacMillan.

So far Skalbania has not replied and Cliff Fletcher, general manager of the Flames, says he knows nothing about it.

The feud between Sittler, a big favorite with Toronto fans, and Ballard began when Ballard tried to get a court order to stop Sittler from taking part in the television series Showdown.

Then Sittler and Imlach got into a name-calling period and when the Leafs traded Lanny McDonald to Colorado Rockies, Sittler tore the C off his sweater in protest.

A number of deals for Sittler have apparently fallen through. He was said to be going to Buffalo Sabres for Richard Martin, but that didn't come off. Then he was supposed to be going to Philadelphia for Rick MacLeish and Behn Wilson.

Then the Leafs asked New York Rangers for Ron Duguay, but the Rangers balked, saying the price was too high.

Minnesota was reported to have made an offer, but Sittler is still a Leaf — and he says he will be at training camp.

He has a no-trade clause in his contract and he says it will cost Ballard $500,000 to remove it.

Ballard, however, says if he can't trade Sittler he will pay him to sit in the stands.

Stage set for Times tennis finals

By MAX LOW

Young Steve Majocha will take to the courts this weekend in an attempt to emulate last year's feat performed by Kerry Chan.

With a whirlwind effort, the dynamic hard-hitting Kerry stormed to two titles — the open men's and junior boys' singles — in the summer-long Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis tournament a year ago.

It was the first time anyone had done it but Majocha, who is through to the semi-finals of the boys' singles and ousted John Zanic 6-2, 6-4 to reach the last four out of a starting field of 131 players in the men's event, has a chance to be a repeat double winner when the seventh annual Times Tourney winds up this weekend.

Semi-finals of all five events will be played at Henderson Park starting at noon on Saturday and the finals begin at noon Sunday with the presentation of trophies set for around 3:30 to 4 p.m.

Thanks to the great co-operation of the Oak Bay Municipality and its tennis co-ordinator Roger Skillings, should the weather turn nasty play will be transferred both days to the Bubble at the Oak Bay Rec Centre.

Although Majocha does have the opportunity to go for two titles, the 18-year-old has a tough weekend road ahead of him. He meets top-seeded Rick Folk, who lost in last year's junior semi-final to Chan and who, too, has turned 18 after the Oct. 1 deadline. And in the men's event semis, Steve takes on veteran Joe Renz.

A baker with Safeway, the 42-year-old Renz has been one of this summer's big surprises in the tourney. He went out early last year to eventual runner-up Larry Mais and has had to fight hard all the way to reach the last four. His 3-6, 6-4, 6-4 quarter-final victory over steady David Hsu was a classic example of the comebacks he has been forced to make.

But Renz has enjoyed himself and, in fact, took the time to sit down and tell us so, describing the Times Tennis Tourney in his letter as "one of the most exciting events in Victoria!"

Actually, Majocha is one of five players who are bidding for two titles each this weekend and two of those five are the highly-regarded husband and wife pair, Chad and Pam Gaffield.

Chad, a 29-year-old history professor at the University of Victoria, has only been in the city a year but has played a lot of tournament tennis in both Toronto and Montreal and is probably the hottest favorite to take the men's title since we started our parks tourney seven years ago.

Chad downed Kerry's brother Lorne Chan 9-4 to reach the semis and on Saturday plays Jay Wilson, a 19-year-old teacher's aide at Esquimalt High School.

An Esquimalt grad himself, Jay is one of the other players in two events as he teams with Cory Aspden in the mixed doubles semi-finals where they play Kerry Chan and Charlayne Joe. Cory also has a shot at another title in the junior girls' singles where she plays Carol Lauzon in the semis.

Pam Gaffield is the fifth player to reach two semi-finals but she has to wait until Saturday afternoon to learn who her women's singles opponent is. Mary Alford gets back from a trip to South Africa Friday and plays Linda Lee at 11 a.m. Saturday at Henderson Park in a quarter-final match.

On the other side of the draw, former members of the same field hockey team — Lynn Derry and Marg Mainwaring — play off.

The Gaffields take on Alf Hass and Jill McKay in the other mixed doubles semi-final.

And in Saturday's remaining semi-finals, 17-year-old Bob Brown takes on 15-year-old David Blair in the junior boys' event and Correne Gillies plays Angela Heimlich in the girls' singles.

Immediately following the playing of the finals, Times publisher Colin McCullough will present engraved prizes to all winners and runners-up. And, for the second year in a row, Ken Holman, owner of Centre Court Racquets in the Stadacona Centre, will be on hand to present a bonus award of a new Black Knight racquet to each champion.

B.C. teams trail

Times News Services

There was something odd about the 15th hole at the Ashburn Golf Club in Halifax during the first round of the Canadian men's amateur championship Wednesday.

"I know the greens were a problem for a lot of the guys," said former champion Gary Cowan of Kitchener, "But I waited 45 minutes to get off the 15th tee."

The 437-yard, par-four hole was a common complaint Wednesday.

"It plays too long for a par-four and too short for a par-five," said one expert.

"I don't know what it was, but they (the Royal Canadian Golf Association) should watch it more closely," said Cowan, winner of the Amateur in 1961. "The round took just too long to play today."

Ashburn wasn't particularly friendly to any of the 149 amateurs who teed up in search of the championship.

Only three players — Eric Kaufmanis of Ottawa, Eric Reid of Fredericton and Don White of London, Ont. — managed to equal par and pre-tournament predicitons that an over-par score would win the championship appeared accurate.

Quebec surprised by taking an early lead in the Willingdon Cup team matches. Quebec had a total of 220 and a five-shot lead over Ontario and defending champion British Columbia.

Only the lowest three scores from each four-man team are counted.

Meanwhile, in London, Ont., Australians, led by Edwina Kennedy, ran away with the opening round of the Canadian women's championship.

Kennedy ignored the heat and humidity plus the slow play that resulted in five-hour rounds to a shoot a two-under par 72 for a two-shot lead over Barbara Bunkowsky of Campbellville, Ont., and fellow Australian Dennise Hutton.

The Australians didn't stop there. Alone in fourth spot at 75 was Jane Crafter while Louise Briers, the fourth member of the team, was tied with four others at 76.

A group at 77 included Lake Cowichan's Dawn Coe.

British Columbia's team, which includes Dorothy DeGirolamo of Victoria, scored 246 and found itself 18 strokes behind Ontario (228) in the interprovincial team championship. Alberta was second at 240 and Quebec third at 243.

DeGirolamo was the low scorer for B.C. with an 80. Gail Harvey Moore of Coquitlam managed an 82 while Flo McFall and Val White Westell, also from the Greater Vancouver area, scored 84s.

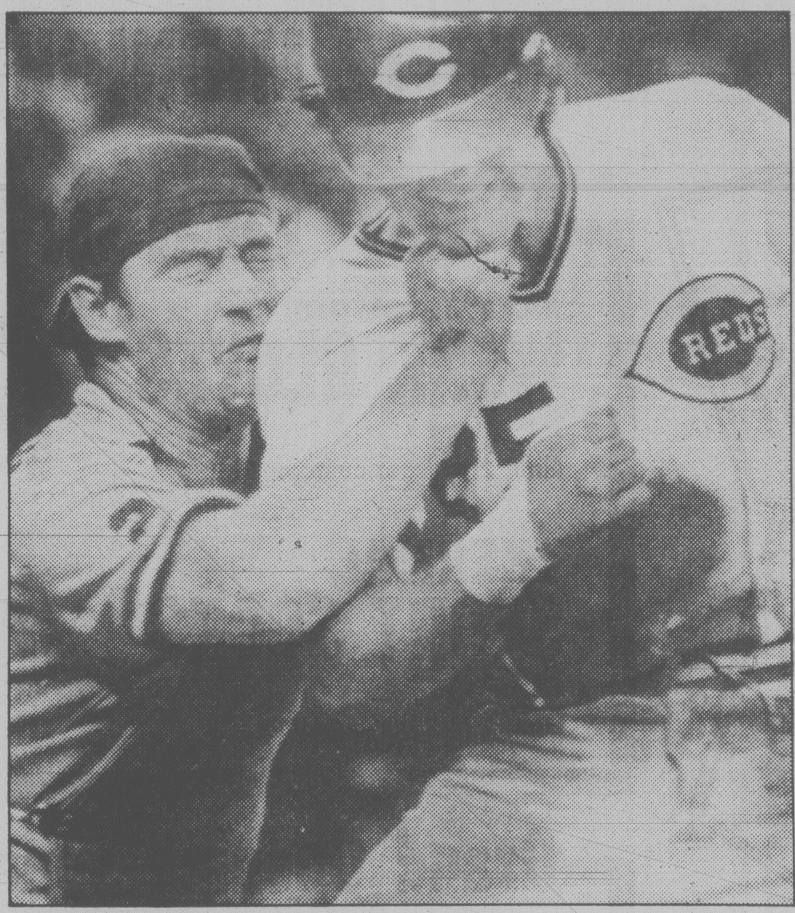
Trail in final

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Trail, B.C., will meet Calgary Centennials on Saturday to determine the Canadian Little League baseball champion.

Trail won its fifth consecutive game Wednesday, dropping Brockville, Ont., 6-2, and Calgary defeated winless Copper Cliff 8-2.



"'SCUSE ME" meeting at home plate in Cincinnati was hardest on Reds' base-runner Ray Knight, who caught fist on chin as well as tag on back by St. Louis Cardinal catcher Ted Simmons. Knight tried to score from third base on fly ball to outfield, but was nabbed at home in 10th inning. Cincinnati finally won, 4-3, in 12th.

Callan easy winner

Mark Callan of Uplands carded a par 70 Wednesday to win the inaugural Junior Invitational tournament at Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club.

Callan, 18, who is warming up for the Canadian junior tourney starting Wednesday at Red Deer, fired two birdies and two bogies to finish three strokes ahead of Bruce Barlow of the host club.

Neil O'Leary and Paul Selina of Royal Colwood and Kerry Taylor of Uplands tied for third place in the field of 35 with 76s.

Terry Budzinski of Gorge Vale won the handicap title on a countback after finishing in a deadlock with Harry Christ of Royal Colwood and Jeff Loukes of Uplands with net 67s.

Butler Brothers forced a third and deciding game in the Victoria-Saanich Senior Women's Softball League playoff final Wednesday by blanking Bemister's Welding 5-0 at Hyacinth Park.

Gina Olson pitched a five-hitter and Lisa Underwood hit a single, a triple and scored in three trips to the plate to lead Butlers.

The final game is scheduled for 6:30 tonight at the same site.

At Heywood Avenue Park, Knowles Realty tripped Mears Realty 4-1 in the opening game of the best-of-five Heywood Men's League playoff final.

Dale Ewasiuk set the hitting pace with a home run, a single and a walk in three trips while Murray Sluggett homered and singled and scored twice and Ron Grant doubled and scored.

Larry McKinnon and Brian Scotney limited Mears to four hits.

Bernie Willock and Tom Morris of Victoria helped the British Columbia team to a silver medal in the senior men's team time trials at the Canadian cycling championships Wednesday in Montreal.

Quebec finished first over the 100-kilometre course in 2:13.10, British Columbia was second in 2:15.37 and Ontario third in 2:16.29.

B.C. won the junior time trials in 1:31.15 over 68 kilometres.

Quebec was more than three minutes behind at 1:34.47.

Calgary Games bid gets nod

CALGARY (CP) — A top official of the International Ski Federation says he expects Calgary will stage the 1988 Winter Olympics.

Dr. Bud Little, an American in charge of the preliminary inspection of Calgary's bid for the 1988 Games, and three other federation officials toured Olympic facilities around the city Wednesday and gave them a clean bill of health.

The International Olympic Committee will choose the site for the 1988 Games when it meets in Baden-Baden, West Germany, in 1982.

Sports tonight

Baseball, softball and harness racing provide some variety tonight for sports fans in the Greater Victoria area.

In baseball, Victoria Blues take in Grays Harbor Loggers in a Northwest League doubleheader starting at 6 in Royal Athletic Park.

Playoffs are on tap in softball action, which all gets underway at 6:30.

Tally-Ho tackles Victoria Athletics in the opener of a best-of-five Stuffy McGinnis Men's League semi-final at Central Park; Mears Realty and Knowles Realty square off in the second game of the best-of-five Heywood Men's League final at Heywood Avenue Park and Butler Bros. and Bemister's Welding meet in the deciding game of the best-of-three Victoria-Saanich Senior Women's League final at Hyacinth Park.

Harness racing at Sandown Raceway starts with a parade to the post at 5:20.

Television

Channel 8 will telecast the North American Soccer League game between Vancouver Whitecaps and Tulsa at 6.

60-day ban

TORONTO (CP) — A boxer knocked out in a bout will not be allowed to fight in Ontario for at least 60 days after the knockout, under a new provincial regulation.

The Ontario government promised action after the death last month of U.S. boxer Cleveland Denny, knocked unconscious by Gaetan Hart in a fight in Montreal.

Reuss hit by virus but Expos get upset

Times News Services

Tossing a six-hitter at Montreal Expos on Wednesday night at Montreal did as much for Jerry Reuss's stomach as it did for the West Division title hopes of Los Angeles Dodgers. And when it was over, it was the Expos who were upset.

After spending most of the day in bed with an upset stomach Reuss, 15-4, improved as the game went along and completed a five-strikeout, no-walk 5-1 performance for his 15th win.

Defeat left the Expos two games behind Pittsburgh who lost to Houston 5-1 and kept the Dodgers two games behind Houston.

Dodgers jumped on Montreal starter Steve Rogers, 11-9, for a pair of runs in the first inning, highlighted by Dusty Baker's run-scoring triple and an RBI single by Ron Cey. That was all Reuss needed. (Linescores on page 15)

Rookie spark in Lion win

Rookie quarterback Roy Dewalt guided the injury-riddled B.C. Lions to a share of second place in the Western Conference of the Canadian Football League Wednesday.

Filling in for the injured Joe Paopao, Dewalt passed for two touchdowns as the Lions beat Saskatchewan Roughriders 31-21 before a crowd of 25,124 — third largest in Roughrider history — at Regina.

The win lifted the Lions into a tie for second place with Calgary Stampeders and kept them four points ahead of Winnipeg Blue Bombers who thumped the Tiger-Cats 34-13 at Hamilton.

The Lions have a game in hand over the Stampeders and are only two points behind first-place Edmonton Eskimos.

Dewalt threw a 40-yard touchdown pass to Al Charuk and a 54-yard strike to Leon Bright.

The other B.C. touchdown was scored by Don Taylor on a six-yard run and Lui Passaglia kicked 11 points on two field goals, two singles and three converts. Saskatchewan also gave up a first-quarter safety touch.

Dwight Edwards led the Saskatchewan scoring with two touchdowns on passes of 49 and 37 yards from John Hufnagel. The rest of the scoring came from Bob Macoritti who hit for two field goals, two converts and a single.

The Lions blew several golden scoring opportunities but were consistently given good field position by the fine running of Devon Ford on kickoff and punt returns.

The teams started slowly in the first quarter, trading singles with Macoritti conceding a safety touch when Saskatchewan faced third down on their 13 going into a strong wind. He ended the quarter with a 26-yard field goal, the 100th of his career.

B.C. got the first break in the game in the second quarter when they blocked a Saskatchwan punt attempt at the Roughriders' 43 and Richard Murray recovered it at the Saskatchewan six. On the next play Taylor crashed over for the game's first touchdown.

Two minutes later Hufnagel connected with Edwards on a 49-yard pass to put Saskatchewan into an 11-10 half-time lead.

At Hamilton, the Blue Bombers came up with an explosive offensive display in the second half.

The teams were tied 10-10 at the half, but the Blue Bombers ran way with the game in the final 30 minutes.

A 61-yard touchdown on a punt return by Winnipeg's Robert Woods with two minutes left in the game was the final embarrassment for the Tiger-Cats.

The Blue Bombers had virtually assured themselves of a victory less than two minutes earlier when Winnipeg linebacker Leo Ezerins intercepted a Dave Marler pass and Willie Miller scored on a subsequent eight-yard run.

Fine, suspension laugh to Weaver

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Baltimore Orioles, attempting to overtake first-place New York Yankees in the American League East, might have to play three games in the near future without manager Earl Weaver. But if you ask the fiery Weaver, he'll say he's not going anywhere.

Weaver was suspended for three days and fined an unspecified amount by AL president Lee MacPhail on Wednesday as the result of a run-in with the umpires during a game against the Yankees last Saturday. The suspension was to begin this Friday, but has been stayed pending an appeal of the ruling.

Baltimore general manager Hank Peters announced the ruling would be appealed, but at Anaheim Stadium shortly before the Orioles' game against California Angels on Wednesday night, Weaver was all smiles and said he: "didn't know what I'd be appealing."

While fines and suspensions are considered serious business by most, Weaver was anything but serious while making out a lineup card in his office.

"My plans are to manage, why not? I don't pay any attention to this stuff. This is juvenile. As far as I'm concerned, I laugh at it."

Liquor firm executives disciplined

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two senior liquor company executives have had their licences revoked by the B.C. Liquor Control and Licensing Branch for four months.

Ken Liss, director of the Pacific division of Distillers Co. (Canada) Ltd., and Herb Reinhardt, general manager of McGuiness Distillers Ltd., were disciplined for improprieties involving their companies and liquor products.

The suspension for Liss lasts until the end of October and that for Reinhardt continues to the end of September. During that time two executives cannot represent their products.

Liss had his licence revoked when it was found that about double the amount normally kept by companies for sampling purposes was being stored in Distillers Co. premises.

The extra liquor at Distillers, which is the Canadian subsidiary of the world's largest producer of scotch whiskey, came to attention of th liquor branch during a Vancouver police investigation of a robbery of $6,000 of liquor.

Liss was disciplined because he is the senior executive of Distillers Co. in B.C.

Reinhardt was disciplined after his company arranged a winetasting through the West German consulate in Vancouver. The consulate used diplomatic privilege to import about 20 cases of various Sichel wines not available in B.C., although it is not permitted to distribute wine brought into the province.

Some of the leftover wine disappeared after the tasting, the liquor branch says, and Reinhardt could not account for it. As senior executive in B.C. of McGuiness Distillers Ltd., he had his licence revoked.

LRB move dims chance for local autonomy bid?

School board efforts to put non-professional staff bargaining on a better footing appear dimmed by a decision of the provincial Labor Relations Board.

Trustees of Greater Victoria School District applied to divorce the board from the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association (GVLRA), the municipal-regional-school district bargaining agency, on grounds of dissatisfaction.

But the LRB has denied a similar application by Nanaimo School District to detach itself from Mid-Island Public Employers Association.

Victoria board chairman Carol Pickup sees a parallel and is not hopeful of the local application's success.

She said it was important for city trustees to indicate they weren't happy with the present situation.

She said she hadn't expected to see the application accepted, "given the current government and its philosophy".

She noted Education Minister Brian Smith was a chief proponent of establishing GVLRA when he was mayor of Oak Bay.

There are few school boards in these large bargaining groups, Pickup said. The main argument against boards joining, in the eyes of Greater Victoria district, is the "lack of community of interest with municipalities and police boards."

School board jobs are quite different with most employees performing services to people rather than to property, she feels.

"At GVLRA meetings the issues dealt with time after time after time had nothing to do with us at all."

Membership in GVLRA had caused deterioration of employee relations and the method of GVLRA chief negotiator Carl Anselm causes problems through his wording of contracts and one-man style, Pickup said.

If the board were to join forces with other bodies for bargaining purposes it would make more sense to join other school districts, she suggested.

Skatethon to raise cash for whale fight

Greenpeace will stage a Labor Day skatethon Sept. 1 from Ship Point to Clover Point to raise funds for the campaign against whale killing.

Participants can use roller skates, skateboards or wheelchairs.

Registration will be at Ship Point, at the foot of Wharf Street and Fort, between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Participants will set off for Clover Point between 1 and 5 p.m.

Pledge packets and information can be obtained at the Oak Bay Recreation Centre, Fernwood Community Centre, Crystal Pool, Richards Records, Blue Pacific Skate Shop and the Greenpeace office at 503 Yates.

The event will be an all-day affair, complete with music, a speed skating team, trick skating demonstrations, clowns, food, Arnold the Juggler, the Bubbleman and other attractions.

Prizes will be given, including roller skates for the first person to finish the 10-kilometre course and the person with the most pledges.

Greenpeace has campaigned to save the sperm whale for the past six years. The group's protest ship Rainbow Warrior is now under seizure in a Spanish port after trying to block Spanish whaling.

Proceeds from the skatethon will be used for Greenpeace's campaign to change Canada's position at International Whaling Commission meetings. This year, Canada was the only non-whaling country to vote against a world-wide ban on the killing of sperm whales.

Labor body raps merger

The Thomson newspaper empire was condemned in a unanimous vote Wednesday by the Victoria Labor Council for the merger of The Daily Colonist and Victoria Times.

The executive resolution endorsed by delegates deplored the lack of consultation with Victoria Press unions in connection with staff layoffs.

The two dailies are to be replaced Sept. 2 by the Times-Colonist, a single paper with morning and afternoon editions.

Announcement of the impending merger was made Aug. 1. Some 61 employees learned the same day they were to be laid off at the end of the month. Three unions are challenging the layoff decision and shift changes through arbitration and grievance procedure.

Wednesday's labor council meeting was the first since the merger was announced.

Clarence Munro of the International Typographical Union told delegates his union had estimated that the change and layoffs would save the Toronto-based Thomson chain $1 million.

Noting that the Colonist had a record of publication since 1858, Larry Ryan said: "While I had many editorial differences over the years with the newspaper, I must acknowledge its contribution to the community."

He said the paper has significant heritage characteristics.

He said the city had bylaws to protect heritage buildings and suggested it is too bad there isn't some protection for a "heritage" newspaper like the Colonist.

The paper had another link with history, according to Ryan, who said the printers, members of the ITU, were members of the first union to affiliate with the labor council nearly 100 years ago.

Davis criticizes utilities bill

For the most part, the B.C. government's new public utilities commission bill is nothing but a carryover from NDP legislation of 1974, maverick Social Credit MLA Jack Davis said Wednesday.

The North Vancouver-Seymour backbencher termed the legislation heavy-handed, noting regulatory powers under bill 52 which would give the utilities commission authority to examine all the costs of a company and to set its prices. He also said company operations can be closely scrutinized.

Davis said that kind of activity by the government is viewed with apprehension by companies which might come under a utilities bill. He also said a provision that an act of the commission may not be questioned is unnecessary.

Davis said he was pleased with what he said was the only new section of the bill, the project review process. He said the process will ensure environmental standards are met before construction proceeds.

Meanwhile, the Employers' Council of B.C. in a telegram to Premier Bill Bennett and Energy Minister Bob McClelland, has urged delaying passage of the bill until the next session of the legislature.

"We do not believe legislation of this major nature should be passed into law without the opportunity for consideration by those who will be affected by it and the opportunity for them to make their views available to you," the council said.

11 air cadets earn wings

Eleven air cadets from Vancouver Island were among 58 who graduated and received their wings at the Pacific Region Glider School at Princeton this month.

Tracy Lindgren, Ian Tromp, Eric Payne and Ernest Salmon, all of Victoria's 89th Squadron, were among the graduates, as were Dean Friedt and David Shaw of the Sidney squadron, and Richard Dhur of Colwood.

Other island graduates were Renee Assaf and Kim McGregor of Nanaimo, Stephen Robinson of Comox and Lindsey Stretch of Cowichan.

Originally, 60 students were enrolled in the course.

Reviewing officer at the graduation parade and wings presentation was Brig.-Gen. W.J. Carr (Rtd.). He was accompanied by Paul Cumberland, chairman of the British Columbia Committee of the Air Cadet League of Canada.

Earlier this month the students were inspected by Rear-Admiral Michael Martin, commander maritime command Pacific. Martin, who retired today, was mainly responsible for moving the glider school from Cassidy Air Port near Nanaimo to Princeton.

Island dancers score in tests

A number of Victoria and Vancouver Island dancers were successful in placing in their classes at the Highland Dance competitions held recently in Alberta.

These included the Calgary Open, the Alberta 75 Championships, the Northern Canadian and Canadian Inter-Provincial Championships.

More than 800 dancers from across Canada competed in the week-long festivities, involving piping and drumming as well as dancing.

Of thirty-eight dancers from the Island, 22 represented Victoria.

Jennifer Lindsay of Sidney, and Jennifer Thompson of Comox took the under 16 class and runner up in the Canadian Cnampionship class. Lindsay competes in Scotland this month as Canadian representative.

In the Alberta open class, Lisa Finlayson, Louise McCorquodale, Janet Urchison, Laura-Lee McTavish, Terri Liustone and Tamara Ryan all brought trophies home with them.

In all, B.C. dancers collected 291 medals.

Transportation assistance to Alberta was awarded to 15 V.I. dancers. These costs were paid by the newly formed provincial body of Highland Games Associations, the West Coast Scottish Cultural Association.

The following dancers were succesful in placing in their classes in Alberta:

Richel Condie, Michele Spilsbury, Lisa Kirkendale, Lisa Finlayson, Eden Hollick, Lori Ennals, Tracy Curtis, Laurel Curtis, Louise McCorquodale, Carlena Krutzmann, Jennifer Lindsay, Julie Obreza, Bonnie Price, Janet Urchison, Winona White, Tammy Whyte, Janice Donaldson, Laura-Lee McTavish, all from Victoria.

Mary McGrath, Port Alberni; Kathleen Monk, Kerri Monk, Duncan; Margaret Provencal, Parksville; Tamara Ryan, Port McNeil; Jennifer Thompson, Comox; Bobbi Anne Hilder, Courtenay; Sandra Dailey, Port Alberni.

Striking stars plan benefit for actors

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A group of striking television stars said Wednesday they will hold a celebrity-studded fundraiser at the Hollywood Bowl on Sept. 16 to help their less fortunate colleagues.

"No fellow actor should have to go hungry," says Henry Winkler, who plays Fonze in ABC-TV's Happy Days, at a news conference.

"No fellow actor should have to lose their phone. No fellow actor should have their car taken from them or their mortgage foreclosed." Winkler said.

The benefit is designed to help striking members of the Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Musicians, Winkler said.

He said actors have always performed at benefits for charities, and "we are now doing a benefit to help ourselves."

The American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, also on strike against producers, has an adequate strike benefit fund and will not receive proceeds from the gala, an artists federation spokesman said.

Winkler and Alan Alda, star of M-A-S-H, will host the show with Howard Hesemann of WKRP, Ed Asner of Lou Grant, Larry Hagman of Dallas and Jane Fonda.

Performers who have agreed to appear include singer Waylon Jennings, comediennes Lily Tomlin and Penny Marshall and Cindy Williams of Laverne and Shirley.

Tickets for the three-hour program range from $5 to more than $100, said Charlie Haid, chairman of the actors guild Strike Benefit Committee. He said the show may raise up to $200,000.

The guild, whose 47,000 members have been on strike since July 21, has no strike benefit fund.

Smile show: one guffaw

By AUDREY JOHNSON

It's a show that contains only one genuine guffaw; the rest is chuckle and giggle.

But it wears a face-splitting smile wall to wall and that's entertainment enough for most people.

At least the 1980 Smile Show can keep a Victorian amused, from mildly to very, throughout the evening.

Out-of-town visitors who don't know that Oak Bay is a typically Victoria state of mind characterized by tweeds, brogues and tea parties, or wouldn't recognize Pierre Trudeau if they eyeballed him in the Empress lounge, probably experience a few blank moments.

But my delayed visit to the Smile Show revealed ample talent, energy and charm among the cast and in production detail to compensate for mediocre scripting.

The one-liners are as flat as an undercooked souffle and some of the black-out skits are far from hilarious. On the other hand there is a sprinkle of completely enjoyable 'gang' numbers and solo spots.

When it comes to talent, high on the list and a major contributor to the show's vitality and gloss, is the 'orchestra' consisting of music director and wizard pianist Lorna Paterson and drummer-percussionist George Dixon who raises the temperature of the show to sizzle-point whenever he gets the green light.

A superb sense of clowning conveyed through a supple expressive body and mobile face, is Paul Liittich's contribution. He is a constant delight, appearing in a dozen different guises, from the stranger in the Dangerous Dan McGrew sequence to the Reverend in the Horticultural Society skit and the knight Tristan in the mock-Wagnerian Ireland's Mysterious Past.

Everyone has some particular quality to enhance the show: Kimm Culkin, Lorie Charters and David Kirk sing, dance and act well and are charming in looks and personality; Mary Monks' assured presence, vitality and strength provide an essential anchor; Patrick Hughes knows how to get an audience going with his Scottish and Irish ballads accompanied by guitar and twinkling eyes, and Deryck Hazel provides a fine English speaking and singing voice and a kingly presence to, specifically, the Tristan and Isolde Irish spoof.

Liz Gorrie's vibrancy is apparent in the direction which makes it all the more strange that the show has occasional dead spots; they last only a few seconds but in a show of this kind that's a long time.

Onlookers should be out of breath by intermission but that doesn't happen until the very end, after the never-fail precision number, If I should ever lose my job and the exuberance of the 'Pearlies' sequence.

One number that could be eliminated is the Jerry Gosley life-size puppet routine.

Not because the puppet isn't an effective cartoon of the show's founder, but because the spoken material is tasteless and un-funny without Gosley's live personality to put it over.

In producing this version of the Smile Show, son Anton Gosley has mounted it with a keen eye for visual effectiveness, particularly in the versatile and attractive costuming.

The show continues in the Empress Hotel Crystal Ballroom until Sept. 6.

Theatrescope staging final show

Kaleidoscope Theatre is concluding its Theatrescope '80 Summer Theatre School with the production, Jumping Mouse.

This will be performed by the students from the junior and intermediate courses. It will be seen at The Belfry Theatre, 1291 Gladstone, Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m.

Admission is by donation.

Hay crop program

WINNIPEG (UPC) — Almost 8,000 farmers are participating in a government hay crop incentive program to combat feed shortages caused by drought situations.

"This indicates to us that producers have been happy with the program," Manitoba Agriculture Minister Jim Downey said Friday.

Mordecai Richler, author of the new and highly acclaimed Joshua Now and Then, says he actually was a starving artist once in Paris — so much so that he came down with scurvy. He's better off now, but he tells People magazine he's still afflicted. He battles with his typewriter, to the distress of his family because, "I may be ill-tempered for a week . . . Everyone is walking on eggs while I go through this. Writing is a wasting disease, and it's mine."

A newspaper photograph purporting to show Suzanne Perry, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's former assistant press secretary, sunbathing topless in the south of France will not jeopardize her new position as co-anchorman of Global Television's newscasts, says a Global executive. Ray Heard, the network's general manager and director of TV news, said Monday he has assured Perry "she has no reason to be concerned about this matter."

Perry, who began a training program with the network this week, said she "cannot comment on a photograph or photographs I haven't seen." The photograph appeared in the New York Post.

Confessed spy Anthony Blunt has quit the British Academy after four leading members resigned in protest over his continued presence in Britain's top academic institution for the arts. It was the latest public disgrace for Blunt, who was stripped of his knighthood last November after Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told the House of Commons he had been a spy for the Soviet Union during the Second World War.

A member of the fundamentalist Assemblies of God Church has gone to court in Kansas City, Mo., to seek help in getting her license plate changed. The woman, Tonya Turnbull, says the license plate is causing her to be shunned as "the Antichrist" by her religious acquaintances, and she wants to force the State of Missouri to give her a new one. Miss Turnbull's license plate is CPG-666. She has told the U.S. District Court that she takes the Bible at its word when it says the Antichrist will be known by the number 666. Cited in Miss Turnbull's complaint is Revelations 13:18, which says: "This calls for wisdom: Let him who has understanding reckon the number of the beast, for it is a human number, its number is 666."

Dear Abby:

Our 20-year-old daughter is living at home again after three unsuccessful attempts at apartment living.

She works, but pays us no rent. She's been dating a young man for a short period of time and goes out with him once a week. She stays all night at his apartment, comes home in the morning, changes her clothes and goes to work.

This is upsetting my husband and me. We've told her so, but she says she is doing no wrong because she "loves" him. She also says she has to live her own life, and if we don't get off her back she will move out and we'll never see her again.

We are afraid that this direction she has taken will hurt her. How can he love her if she sees her only once a week, and then just for a sleep-over date?

Abby, it's so hard for us to accept this and be quiet, yet we don't want to lose our daughter. What should we do?

Upset Parents

Dear Parents:

Tell her that as long as she lives under your roof, she'll have to abide by your rules, which do not include sleeping out. If she wants to move, you can't stop her, but I doubt if she will because she's not financially able to hack it alone.

Dear Abby:

Recently the director of the ballet company of which presidential candidate Ronald Reagan's son is a member felt compelled to issue a statement to the press that the younger Reagan and all the other male members of the troupe were "straight" and had "nice girlfriends." It is a sad commentary on our society's attitude toward human sexuality that such a statement was made at all.

Implicit in that announcement were the following erroneous assumptions: 1) That male participation in ballet requires lengthy justification lest it threaten our traditional view of masculinity and feminity; 2) that all male ballet dancers are suspect and therefore proof of their masculinity is required — i.e., having girlfriends; 3) that being gay is bad.

Do you have any additional observations on the above?

R.K.

For your survey on how women over 50 feel about sex: I agree with Tired. I am not a loose woman, but anything gets boring with the same person after 25 years.

Where I work, there are 103 married women between 19 and 65, and just for fun, I decided to ask eech woman if she had ever had an extramarital affair.

Of course I didn't expect an answer, but behold — 73 said yes, 21 said they would if they thought they could get away with it, and 9 told me it was none of my business.

The powers of the mind

By MARK CRANE

NUTLEY, N.J. (AP) — Dorothy Allison never wanted to be a psychic, but she just couldn't turn off the horrifying pictures that kept popping into her head.

"I would say things that greatly upset people," she said. "When I was 14, I had a vision of my father's death. I hated my power then and tried to disregard what I knew."

The 55-year-old housewife is credited with helping police solve 13 murder cases and locate more than 50 missing children.

"My sister has the same power but is deathly afraid of it and doesn't use it."

She just shrugs her shoulders at skeptics and points to closets filled with awards and citations from dozens of police departments around the United States.

"I can understand why people doubt psychics; there are a lot of frauds around," she said. "But no one can call me a fraud when I've been working 18 hours a day for the past 12 years for the police. I don't go to them. They come to me."

She works free of charge out of a love for children and an intense hatred for murderers and child molesters.

The "power" — a combination of a vision and interpretation — is something she can't explain. She doesn't know any other psychics and wouldn't care to meet them. "I work only for the police and parents. I'm not a fortune teller."

Mrs. Allison became known to New Jersey authorities in 1967 when she had a nightmare and led police to a drainpipe where the body of a small boy was found. She first received national attention in 1978 when she led police to the bodies of two teenagers within one week.

"I would stake my life on her," said the mother of a Lodi, N.J., teenager whose body was found in a shallow grave, almost exactly where Mrs. Allison said it would be.

The same week, three boys hunting muskrat in a marsh at a Staten Island, N.Y., shipyard found the skeleton of a 14-year-old girl who had been listed as missing for almost three years.

Two years before the body was found, Mrs. Allison told police it was located in a marshy area, in sight of two bridges and an abandoned car, and near the letters M, A and R.

The girl's body was found in an oil drum at the bottom of a shaft in an area that fit the psychic's description. About 60 metres from the shaft, high on a rock, were the red-painted letters MAR.

Police couldn't explain how the lettering got there or what it meant.

Mrs. Allison, an almost non-stop talker, realizes she could be a millionaire if she wanted, just by going to a gambling casino or racetrack. But that would bore her.

"My mother was a religious psychic and she told me about my power before she died. She told me there should never be any monetary reward for it. My family didn't make a big deal about it and I was treated like the other kids."

While being interviewed, police from two states called Mrs. Allison to seek her assistance.

"The very instant a cop speaks, I start writing things down and get pictures in my mind," she said. "I don't go into a trance or any nonsense like that. It's like turning on a television set in my mind."

She often sees numbers or letters, but not always in the correct order. "I was working on a case in Washington state where a four-year-old boy was missing. I saw a pole and numbers on it. I gave police the numbers and the body was later found by a utility pole that had numbers — but the numbers were in a different order."

Eight of her more famous cases will be documented in a book, A Psychic's Story, to be released in September.

Throughout history there have been people who claimed to possess the power to see into the future

A centre for ESP studies?

Even fortune-telling could be examined

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Soviet newspaper has proposed the foundation of a national center for the study of paranormal healing techniques and other psychic phenomena.

It has long been known that Soviet officialdom is intensely interested in paranormal phenomena such as extrasensory perception, telepathy, the emission of bio-waves by people, ghosts, psychics and telekinesis, the reported ability of some people to move objects without touching them.

Los Angeles Times correspondent Robert Toth was arrested, accused of being a CIA spy stealing Soviet state secrets and ousted in 1977 when a dissident handed him documents dealing with parapsychology.

While such topics have rarely been openly discussed in anything but a scoffing manner, a recent series of approving articles in the government-controlled press suggests authorities may be moving to make the study of paranormal phenomena respectable.

"If we are to talk on a level of the state . . . it is necessary to create a modern, specialized scientific center, where 'bio-fields' could be studied from all sides, something which only few people are doing at the moment," Lev Kolodny wrote in Komsomolskaya Pravda.

The bulk of Kolodny's article was about Juna Davitashvili, a Georgian faith-healer who was recently reported to include President Leonid Brezhnev among her clients.

Mrs. Davitashvili works by the traditional method of the "laying on of hands" and Kolodny said she is thought to generate a mysterious "biological field".

"And this field, when it comes into contact with the field of a sick person, brings relief from some maladies," Kolodny wrote.

He cited several other people with similar reported gifts, among them Moscow engineer V.I. Safonov, Rosa Kuleshova and Nina Kulagina of Leningrad.

Writing in the same paper, Yuri Kobzarev, a member of the prestigious Academy of Sciences and a Hero of Socialist Labor, asked rhetorically if such stories were true.

"I'll answer immediately and unambiguously: yes, such phenomena are a fact, reality, not mysticism," he wrote.

Kobzarev said he had conducted a scientific study of Kulagina's reputed powers. He said "it was possible to establish that, both in healing and in telekinesis, the hands of N.S. Kulagina generate acoustic impulses."

He continued:

"About these fields and the role they play in life and, particularly in extraordinary psycho-physical manifestations, we still know next to nothing.

"The importance of researching these fields, of studying the mechanism of their generation and the mechanism of their effect on the organism can scarcely be overestimated.

"This research, without doubt, will open up new horizons in a series of fields in the science of life and, first of all, in medicine."

A reservoir of talent is going to waste

L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Birth defects and malformations, crippling diseases and physical handicaps, take a vast toll in personal happiness and in economic security. There was a time when such people might have been destined to spend their lives watching time pass them by.

There is now special joy in watching many of these courageous people return to their birthright of participating as dignified, productive members of society.

One single name stands out in bas-relief as being the pioneer in the total concept of rehabilitative medicine. Dr. Howard Rusk, a dedicated philosopher, began the social programs of rehabilitation when it was a totally neglected aspect of medicine and society.

As an educator he is responsible for the training and distribution of doctors all over the world. At the Institute for Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation, in New York City, Dr. Rusk and his colleagues use every available means of communication in a relentless effort to gain public cooperation and understanding for the problems of the handicapped.

For years this plea was a call in the wilderness that fell on deaf ears. The handicapped were almost as distressed by society's refusal to give them a chance to use their talents as they were by their physical condition.

Today, the call is being heard, echoed and re-echoed. At long last the public has begun to realize that huge reservoirs of untapped talents, skills, creativity and intellectual potential lie within the capacity of the handicapped.

Employers are learning that the handicapped are not a burden. Rather are they an unexpected boon because of their sense of responsiblity and dedication.

The handicapped want no sympathy and no special privileges. They simply want to be accepted in terms of their capabilities, rather than in terms of their physical handicap. Society, then, in the process of giving this support, reaps the greatest benefits.

Hospitals all over the United States now have rehabilitative programs. Never do they refuse the challenge of reconstructing lives limited by abnormalities, strokes, injuries and neurological defects. Their dedicated efforts have made gratifying progress, but their greatest contribution has been in opening the doors of understanding, respect, opportunity and appreciation to thousands of useful, talented and grateful human beings.

Dr. Coleman welcomes letters from his readers. Write in care of the Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4.

Chew worse than puff?

Canadian Press

Many people chew tobacco rather than smoke it because they feel it is better for their health but an article in the Journal of the American Medical Association says they may be wrong.

Chewing tobacco may be more harmful to the mouth than cigarettes. Its possible effects include gum recession and leukoplakia, the formation of a small white sore which in more than one in 20 cases becomes a cancer. A nitrosamine which can be isolated from snuff leads to tumors in experimental animals.

The article also refers to an Indian study of cancers in and around the mouth which could be traced to chewing tobacco. Chewing tobacco was found to increase the risk of cancer in the mouth area sixfold. Chewing and smoking together increased the risk tenfold.

Food additives debate rages nutrition matters

dr. elizabeth bright-see and jane hope

Additives. Just mention the word and you'll find yourself in the centre of a heated debate over the pros and cons of additives. Consumers are confused and concerned. Perhaps rightly so. Think back to cyclamates, red dye No. 2, and saccharin, which, at one time, we were told were "safe". Unfortunately, nothing these days is black or white and we have to learn to weigh the pros and cons. So let's look at the additive issue in perspective.

The growing consumer mistrust over additives in our food supply has led to the current love affair with so-called natural foods. In the summer of 1979, Health and Welfare Canada asked some 25,000 Canadians their opinion of additives. They also asked "what is a food additive?", "what foods contain additives?", "is the control of their use adequate?", and "are you concerned about the effects of additives on your health".

As expected, a wide range of answers were received. But the message was clear.

The majority of those surveyed said that they were concerned about additives in foods and were trying to eat food with less additives. It was interesting, however, to note that many did not really know what additives are, what foods they are used in, or what laws regulate their use. These results weren't surprising. It's a complex subject.

Jsst defining food additives isn't easy. For example, one person surveyed stated, "If it wasn't in the food product to start with or would not have been present naturally, but was added at any point in the production of the food, it was an additive". And that's how we often think of a food additive. But that definition is quite different from the legal definition which is "food additives are substances that affect the characteristics of food and do not include salt, sugar, starch, vitamins, mineral nutrients, amino acids, spices, flavoring preparations, agricultural chemicals, veterinary drugs and food materials". Salt, sugar and starch are considered to be "ingredients", things we commonly add to food. The other substances listed are covered under different regulations.

Additives certainly aren't new. We've used salt for preservation and flavoring for so long that we don't even call it an additive any more. You probably even use some of the additives at home — sodium bicarbonate (or common baking soda), potassium bitartrate (cream of tartar), acetic acid (vinegar), or aluminum potassium sulfate (alum for making pickles).

But for centuries, the use of additives wasn't controlled. Spices were added to spoiled meat to mask the flavor; sawdust or floor sweepings were added to coffee as extenders.

Today, the first rule in allowing any additive to be used in that it must not be a health hazard. Food manufacturers must supply proof of safety to government. In the U.S., a Food and Drug Administration battle is going on. FDA want to classify "vitamin" B17 (which is not a vitamin) as a food additive to force producers to prove that it is safe for human use. The producers, on the other hand, want it classified as a "natural" food substance to force the government to prove that it is hazardous.

Hazard and toxic are often thought to be identical terms. But they're really not. Essential vitamins and minerals or common salt can be toxic if you consume large amounts. But they're certainly not hazardous to health if used in appropriate amounts.

The aim of government in testing potential food additives is to prove that they're not hazardous, not to prove that they're not toxic. To do this, different amounts of the substances are fed to a minimum of two kinds of animals for at least one lifetime of these animals. The growth and behaviour of these animals are watched, biochemical tests are made and tissues are analyzed. A level is found that has absolutely no adverse effect on the animal called the "no-effect dose".

Humans are obviously not completely like the test animals and to allow for this difference, the additive may be added to foods so that a human would get at most one-one hundredth of the "no-effect dose" in any one day.

Eating could give you a headache

LONDON (CP) — Eating gives some people headaches.

A British study of persons suffering from migraine headaches found food caused the pain.

The study involved reducing daily food intake to a bare minimum.

The subjects were were allowed to have lamb, pears and spring water, all of which are well tolerated by most people.

Then the patient was reintroduced, one by one, to the foods which had been eliminated, thus eventually isolating the ones responsible for the migraine.

Seventy per cent of patients in the study had one or more food groups which produced migraine headaches. Milk, cereals, rice, eggs, and chocolate were the most frequent migraine-producers among the 13 foods tested.

Cyril Nicholas — herbs did the trick

Medicine man a real healer

NELSON HOUSE, Man. (CP) — Ninety-year-old Cyril Nicholas has seen plenty to convince him that Indian medicine works.

What went into the powders and poultices of medicine women and men always remained a secret, said the trapper, hunter and dog-team freighter.

"But we were always aware that the herbs they used were part of God's provision for his people."

Nicholas, who spent many years carrying supplies to smaller communities further north, said he has seen badly-injured and crippled legs healed by a medicine man's massaging and application of powders and water poultices.

People with injured legs were told to stay in bed for two nights and a day, he said.

"The medicine men told them if they felt something in their legs after the two nights, they'd walk again."

Nicholas said he has seen many badly injured people get well, and usually — as in an accident involving his brother-in-law — it didn't take long.

"There were two pairs of hunters tracking the same moose," Nicholas said. "My brother-in-law Job and I were walking so close together that the other guys saw four legs moving through the bush and they thought it must be the moose."

The other hunters fired a shot which grazed Nicholas's elbow, but caught Job square in the chest.

"The other men came up to us and we lit a fire. We laid Job down in the snow and did everything we could to keep him warm.

"But the blood was oozing out of the wound every time he breathed. His clothes were heavy with blood."

The men brought Job back to a nearby camp and sent for a medicine woman.

She boiled some Indian medicine, Nicholas said, and poured it right into the hole in Job's chest. The residue was used to make a poultice which was wrapped around Job with the inner skin of birchbark.

"Job got better and by the summer he was working with us on portages."

On treaty day, a doctor visited Nelson House, removed the bandage and found the bullet had struck a few millimetres from the man's heart.

"The doctor thought Job's recovery was something close to a miracle."

Maloney's gadget can fight the din

By JUDY CREIGHTON
CP Lifestyle Editor

TORONTO (CP) — In Socrates' time, two men could stand at opposite sides of an area the size of a football field and carry on a conversation.

Today, sometimes it's impossible to talk with someone one metre away because there is so much noise in the background.

Take the average family household. It's 8 p.m. and the dishwasher is grinding through its various cycles, your 15-year-old is down in the family room listening to the Rolling Stones as if it's their final concert, the Ewings are embroiling their television audience in an episode of Dallas and father is out mowing the side lawn with the power mower.

That, in a nutshell, says Ed Maloney is noise.

Maloney, 34, is hoping through his Peterborough, Ont., company Health Saver Products that he and his colleagues can alleviate some of the "obvious long-range hazards" of continuous, high noise levels.

His preventive measures are simple, and not new. They're called ear plugs — but with a difference.

One design is called an ear stopple. Made of soft wax, the little flesh-toned pellets are inserted gently into the ear canal to form a seal.

"They're comfortable and don't block out sounds entirely," Maloney said. "In fact, it is entirely possible to carry on a conversation while wearing them as they simply cut down and minimize surrounding noises."

For athletes, his company has developed a totally different type of ear plug.

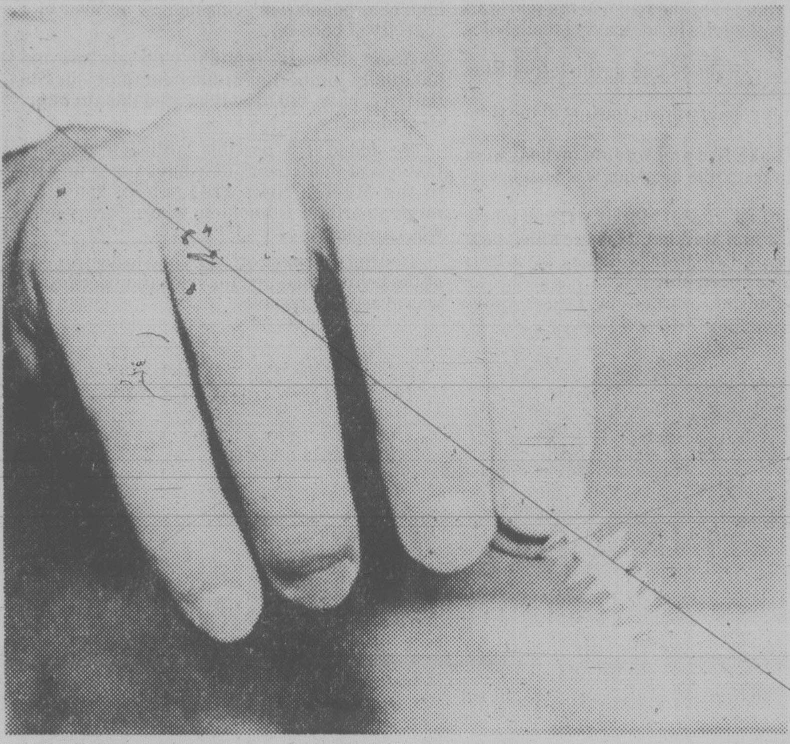
In the past, the standard ear plugs used by swimmers and divers to keep water out of their ears were little rubber stoppers.

Maloney has developed a custom-fitting ear plug. Each end of the white plastic design is a different size — the flanges vary by one millimetre.

"Often each ear is a different size," Maloney said. "The reversible ear plugs custom-fit both ears individually for a more comfortable fit."

The size can be altered by cutting off a flange.

Maloney started his company in the basement of his parents' home in Brockville, Ont.



Ed Maloney's tiny ear stopple can cut out excessive noise

He had originally planned to sell his products to selected industries where decibel levels are higher than is considered safe.

"But noise is not only common to the workplace," he said. "Noise can disturb a child who is studying, a shift worker trying to sleep during the day or someone recuperating at home from hospital surgery — the situations are endless."

Maloney said industry is recognizing that ear stoppers are as essential to the wellbeing of a worker as his hard hat.

Studies have shown that the constant din of daily life can be a source of stress and Maloney's gadget can deal with that problem as well.

"The biggest concern with noise is not that you're going to go deaf but the effect it has on the nervous system."

So successful is Maloney's venture into the noise-cutting business that he now employs 10 people to make the products which he is exporting to 72 countries.

He and his wife Barbara chose Peterborough to live and work because — well, it's quieter.

Astrological Forecast for Friday, August 22, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your claims, assertions are taken seriously — you gain solid foothold and move in direction of goal. Superior taps you for promotion. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio natives figure prominently. Be specific. Study small print and don't give up something for nothing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be ready for a variety of sensations. You travel, write and accurately delineate trends, cycles. Long-distance call or message provides incentive. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius natives figure prominently. In matters of speculation, stick with number 5.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): News received in connection with home repair, financial prospects of family member. Emphasis on mystery, hidden values and a "prophetic dream." Get accounting, take stock, be aware of inventory. Resolve differences connected with rental or lease.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Time is on your side — know it and play waiting game. See places, people in realistic light. Scenario abounds with clandestine arrangements, mystery, temporary seclusion and romance. Pisces, Virgo natives play key roles.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Priorities, aspirations come into focus. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently. Accent on basic issues, resolutions, diet, employment, nutrition and health. You'll have more responsibility and greater chance to "hit jackpot."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Opportunity exists to improve display and distribution — you complete a major assignment. Aries, Libra persons figure prominently. Young persons, creative endeavors, quick changes, special notification and travel dominate busy scenario.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Breakthrough occurs — green light flashes for new project, adventure. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Take cold plunge into future; let go of imagined security blanket. Highlight originality, independence and elevated self-esteem.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You feel as if being drawn in two directions simultaneously. Possible conflict between career and family will be resolved. Avoid brooding. Your "inner voice" will provide answers. Cancer, Leo, Aquarius natives play significant roles.

SAGITTIARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on personal possessions, special collections, acquisition of valuable item as result of long-distance communication. Key now is diversification. Look beyond the immediate — perceive potential and broaden personal horizons.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You get what you want following a temporary delay. Cycle high and your judgment, intuition will be on target. Assert yourself in positive, dynamic manner. You no longer need play "second fiddle." Aquarius, Taurus, Scorpio persons figure in scenario.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Much that occurs is "behind the scenes." If persistent, puzzle pieces will fall into place. Communication is received from one confined to home or hospital. Be receptive, recall past favors, obligations, promises and commitments.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You acquire luxury item which beautifies surroundings and makes you more comfortable. Genuine bargain is available. Family member makes combination request and concession. Be diplomatic and show that you are a "gracious winner."

IF AUGUST 22 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have sense of drama and showmanship. You can be stubborn, rebellious, creative and original. Taurus, Aquarius, Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. You are willing to tear down for purpose of rebuilding on a more solid structure. It is possible that you were estranged or separated from one or both parents at a relatively early age. You are a leader, not a follower. You often make and break your own rules.

Third Alberta bear attack

SLAVE LAKE, Alta. (CP) — The third bear attack in a week has been reported in northern Alberta.

A Wabasca, Alta., woman was camping near Slave Lake when she awoke Sunday morning to find a bear tearing through the wall of her tent.

Her screams and the shouts of her companions drove the bear away, but the unprovoked attack left Mrs. Anna Auger, 60, with two gashes in her head that required 15 stiches to close.

Mrs. Auger was camping in the Marten Hills, about 48 kilometres north of Slave Lake, Alta., with her husband and two other families.

"I just about had a heart attack, I think," she said from her hospital bed in Slave Lake. "Blood was pouring down my hands and I took off my housecoat and wrapped it around my head."

A Slave Lake fish and wildlife official went to the site to track the bear but was unsuccessful.

Geologist Lee Randal Morris, 44, and oil-rig worker Carol Ann Marshal, 24, were killed near Zama, Alta., in two attacks Friday by a bear which has since been killed.

Wayne Pedrini, warden at Lesser Slave Lake Park, said the rash of maulings this summer may be caused by an unusually-high bear population going hungry because of a scarcity of berries.

About 15 bears, familiar with humans and habitually lumbering around camping sites in the park, have had to be relocated this summer, Pedrini said.

He added it is possible, although unlikely, that one of those bears may have made its way to the Marten Hills area, about 250 kilometres north of Edmonton, where Mrs. Auger was camping.

City welcome at talks: Trudeau

Prime Minister Trudeau has told Victoria city council he would welcome municipal participation in the current round of constitutional talks — but it has to be channelled through the provincial government.

In a letter replying to a motion by Ald. Gretchen Brewin which called for native peoples and municipalities to be included, Trudeau said each provincial delegation is free to choose such representatives to go to Ottawa.

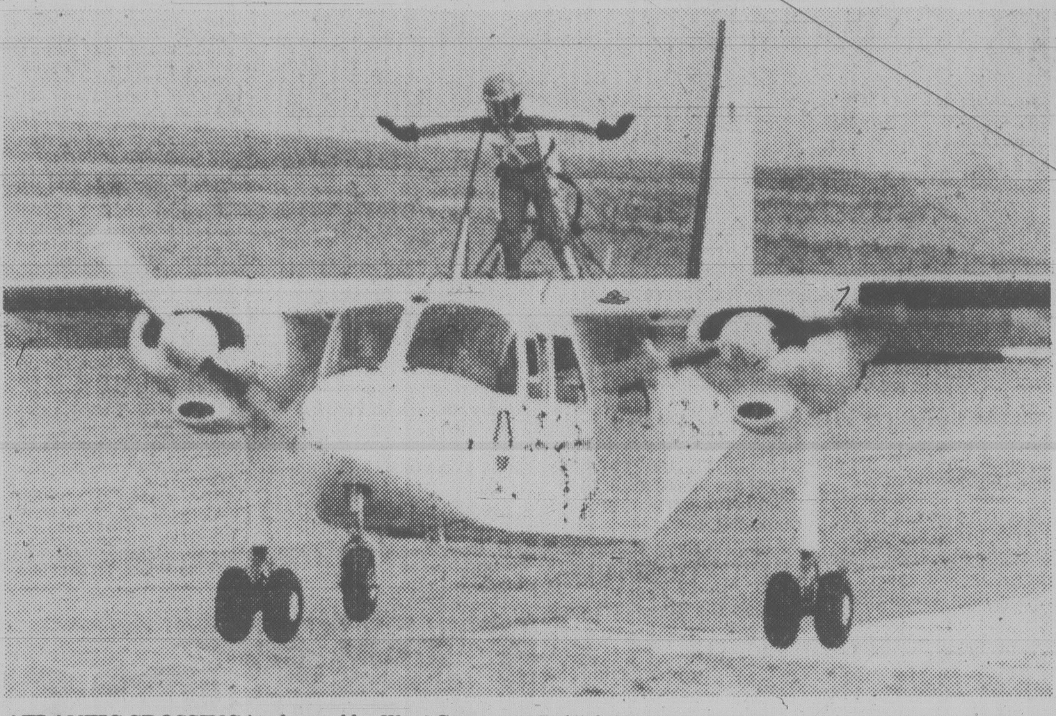
"Each first minister is free, as has been the case, to bring into his delegation those people he decides should have a place in it," the prime minister said.

For individual municipalities to be included, councils would have to convince their respective provincial governments.

"For its part, the government of Canada would be interested to have the constitutional views of municipalities, and would be willing to propose that two representatives of the Federation of Canadian Municipalities be granted observer status at the forthcoming conference of first ministers," Trudeau wrote.

This is the meeting of premiers and the prime minsister in Ottawa Sept. 8-12.

Brewin said she will ask city council to approach Premier Bill Bennett.



ATLANTIC CROSSING is planned by West German stuntman Jaromir Wagner on top of his plane in September. Here, he practises as the plane, a British Norman Islander, takes off from a landing field in Giessen, West Germany. He is planning an east-west Atlantic crossing in a three-stage flight.

Chinese guests may be buyers

OTTAWA (CP) — The most senior Chinese government representative ever to visit Canada begins an 11-day "courtesy call" today which Canadian officials hope will lead to expanded industrial sales over the next few years.

Bo Yibo, China's vice-premier, an advocate of China's current industrial expansion, will discuss general trade topics with Industry Minister Herb Gray and Trade Minister Ed Lumley early next week. But no specific agreements are expected.

Two way trade between the two countries is heading for a record level this year of about $1 billion, federal trade officials predict. But only about 2.4 per cent of Canada's exports of $591.9 million in 1979 were in fully-manufactured goods.

China's main exports to Canada are nuts and textiles — worth about $167.4 million in 1979.

While maintaining traditional exports such as wheat, aluminum ingots, wood pulp and newsprint and potash, officials say Canada wants to increase sales of industrial products which have a high labor content.

The Chinese asked to visit Canada, part of a lengthy tour in the West which includes a month-long visit to the United States after the 13-member leaves Vancouver Aug. 31.

CALGARY (CP) — Canada's fire chiefs want a federal ban on the sale and use of plastic foams in home furnishings.

The ban would last until flammability studies can be completed.

The foams are a major cause of deaths in fires, approximately 300 delegates to the annual meeting of the Canadian Association of Fire Chiefs said in a resolution passed Wednesday.

They also said cellulose insulation should remain under the federal Hazardous Products Act, contrary to the wishes of its distributors, and lightweight panelling and veneers called luan should be put under the act.

The chiefs said plastic foams are dangerous because fire spreads rapidly in furniture stuffed with foam, producing large amounts of toxic gases. The gases included carbon monoxide and hydrogen cyanide.

Percy Clark, president of the association, told a news conference Canadian manufacturers last year produced $3 billion worth of products that would have been affected by the proposed ban, and he expects them to put up a fight. About $50 billion worth of affected plastics was produced in the United States.

The manufacturers will likely call for a board of inquiry "and we'll have to justify our position before it," Clark said.

The effect of a ban would depend on how fast the industry moved to improve its products.

Clark said sufficient improvement would not be costly: the fire resistance of an $800 chesterfield could be improved for $1.50.

The chiefs agreed to counteract a move by distributors of cellulose fibre insulation to question the need for their product to fall under the Hazardous Products Act.

An inquiry into the question has been scheduled for Sept. 8.

Distributors say fire retardant makes up 40 per cent of their cost of production.

The chiefs said cellulose insulation is "being installed in an increasing number of attics and walls in Canadian homes and, if improperly treated, is prone to smouldering and rapid surface-flame spread."

They also said improper manufacturing could result in fire retardant settling out of the cellulose fibres, reducing its effectiveness.

Dog disease sweeps Alberta

CALGARY (CP) — A province-wide epidemic of dog-killing parvovirus disease has already struck about 1,000 of the 40,000 dogs registered in Calgary, Robert Hopper, president of the Academy of Veterinarian Medicine said Wednesday.

The disease is fatal in 15 to 20 per cent of cases.

Hopper describes the situation as serious but stable despite a shortage of the vaccine required to treat the disease.

Cat distemper vaccine is being used as an effective substitute, Hopper said.

Symptons of parvovirus include depression, dehydration, diarrhea, vomiting and loss of blood. The disease is fatal when body fluids are not replaced.

"It is a severe, quickly developing disease," Hopper said. "I have had animals die between the time they come through the front door and the examination room."

The disease was isolated in the 1960s, but was almost unheard of until three years ago.

Hopper said the parvovirus vaccine shortage exists across North America and is likely to continue for several months until the company that produces it catches up with the growing demand.

Dog owners are being advised to have their animals vaccinated with the cat distemper vaccine.

Quake jiggles Ontario

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — An earthquake, centred in western Lake Erie and registering a moderate three on the Richter scale, shook many parts of Essex County on Wednesday.

Police in the area said the tremors rocked houses, broke dishes and woke children about 5:45 a.m. EDT, but there was no serious damage and no one was injured.

It was the second earthquake in the area in less than a month. On July 27, a small quake centred in northern Kentucky shook 14 states and rumbled in southern and southwestern Ontario.

Bob Wetmiller, a seismologist with the federal ministry of energy, mines and resources, said Wednesday's quake, which lasted for about 10 seconds, was probably caused by the shifting of rocks at the bottom of the lake.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. An earthquake of 3.5 on the scale can cause slight damage in the local area.

Scam offered riches, love

WHITEHORSE (CP) — People from various parts of North America testified Wednesday they were bilked of thousands of dollars by two Hawaiian men who offered them love or investment opportunities — and sometimes both.

Jimmey (Kimo) Hui Hui amd Paul Joseph Brennan, both of Honolulu, are facing fraud conspiracy charges in a Yukon Territorial Court trial.

Crown Attorney Ian McKinnon alleged the men had swindled investors in Canada, Alaska, Hawaii and the continental U.S.

Fern Angelopoulis, a divorcee from Biggar, Sask., testified she met Hui Hui on a trip to Hawaii in March, 1979. She gave him money to invest in Kimo Tours, which Hui Hui said would provide guided tours of the Hawaiian islands.

She said Hui Hui also offered to marry her and, after her return to Biggar, continued to ask her for money over the telephone until February, 1980. She gave him more than $37,500, she said.

Elwood Ehrenstrom of Thief River Falls, Minn., told the court he met Hui Hui in Hawaii and later sent him $6,000 to start a small bus tour company. Hui Hui was to make regular reports but never did and Ehrenstrom never saw his money again.

Betty McArthur, a widow from Woodstock, Ont., said she lost $17,500.

She said a friend introduced her to Brennan on the phone and she later met him in Hawaii and lent him some money. Later he visited her in Woodstock, meeting her friends and children and telling them he would marry her.

She said he also seemed interested in getting her friends to invest in Alaska-Hawaii Travel Agency, a company set up to run tours for pipeline workers.

Brennan's ardent phone calls ended when she ran out of money to lend him, she said.

Russell Kreis of Alaska said he invested $4,000 in 1975 in HAP Areas Inc. but the accused told him a third man had stolen the money.

Alaska-Hawaii Travel Agency was then created and Kreis gave the company $6,000 more — which also disappeared. He said the two men accused each other of taking the money.

The investigation began when a local hotel complained the men were running up large bills and seemed unable to pay. When word of the case got around, other witnesses started calling in, said McKinnon.

The trial continues.

Goodies hint Quebec to vote

By Alan Freeman

QUEBEC (CP) — Political mythology in Quebec has it that when the road paving equipment comes out of storage, an election call cannot be far behind.

Judging from the agenda of Transport Minister Denis de Belleval this week, the Parti Quebecois government of Rene Levesque is thinking seriously about going to the polls this fall.

On Tuesday, the transport minister was in the south shore suburbs of Montreal to sign a $2.4-million agreement for widening a local boulevard.

Present at the ceremony were mayors from Greenfield Park and St. Hubert, as well as the PQ national assembly member for Taillon riding, Gilles Michaud.

On Wednesday, it was Quebec City's turn to savor the road-building goodies.

At a ceremony attended by de Belleval, two local PQ assembly members and Mayor Jean Pelletier, it was announced that the province would grant the city $12.8 million for three traffic projects and spend another $8.5 million itself for completion of an expressway interchange.

Other government departments are pumping out communiques about grants for waterworks, residential renovation and local job creation projects, sometimes with a heavy political flavor.

On Tuesday, Social Affairs Minister Denis Lazure was in the Ottawa Valley town of Gatineau to officiate at the start of construction of a 323-bed hospital.

"Let us recall that the construction of the Gatineau hospital was the object of numerous promises by politicians under the old Liberal regime which still remain a dead letter," said the news release issued by the minister's office.

"The Parti Quebecois made a firm commitment in 1976, and today we see the positive result."

Roller coaster crash at CNE

TORONTO (CP) — Nineteen persons were injured in an accident Wednesday on a roller coaster at the Canadian National Exhibition.

The accident occurred on the ride known as The Flyer when an elderly woman, attempting to disembark from a roller coaster car, became entangled.

Opening lead — king of clubs.

Bridge is often a struggle between good luck and good play. To win when suits break favorably and finesses succeed is no great accomplishment, but to win when suits break unfavorably — or finesses lose — is clearly a mark of good management.

Consider this deal where South got to six hearts with a minimum of formality. He reasoned that partner — having jumped to three hearts — had the equivalent of an opening bid in support of hearts, and he consequently knew that his own 19 high-card points would give him a good shot at the slam.

West led the king of clubs and the contract appeared to depend solely on finding the diamonds divided 3-2. In that case the only loser would be a diamond. But after winning the club with the ace, drawing trumps and cashing the A-K of diamonds, declarer discovered to his horror that the diamonds were divided 4-1 and that he would evidently have to lose two diamond tricks and go down one.

But South did not throw in the sponge. He saw that he had a perfectly legitimate chance for the slam, and he adjusted his play so as to overcome the poor diamond division.

He ruffed a club in dummy, cashed the A-K of spades, and ruffed dummy's last spade. He then led the ten of clubs and permitted West to win the trick with the queen, at the same time discarding a diamond from dummy.

West was now in bad shape. He had to return a spade or a club, and, in either case, South would discard dummy's last diamond as he ruffed the return in his hand. As a result, South's only loser proved to be a club — so he brought home the slam despite the unfavorable diamond division.

U.S. silent as UN tells Israelis to back off Jerusalem

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — With the United States abstaining, the UN Security Council censured Israel's new Jerusalem law and called on the 13 states with embassies in the Holy City to withdraw them.

The council resolution, adopted Wednesday by a 14-to-0 vote, declared the law was "null and void and must be rescinded." It ordered Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to report by Nov. 15 whether Israel obeys the order.

In an unusual move, U.S. State Secretary Edmund Muskie appeared before the council to explain why the United States could not support the resolution. He said it was "fundamentally flawed" because it censured only Israel without condemning "violence against Israel or efforts to undermine Israel's legitimate security needs."

Muskie, who interrupted a vacation in Maine for his first UN speech since becoming state secretary four months ago, also defended "the Camp David process and its ultimate goal of a just and lasting peace throughout the region."

Only 13 states have recognized Jerusalem as Israel's capital by maintaining embassies there. Four of them — Venezuela, Ecuador, Uruguay and Chile — announced after the Knesset vote that they will move their embassies to Tel Aviv, the Israeli commercial capital.

Holy war grubstake offered

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia (Reuter) — An 80-year-old Saudi millionaire has offered to finance all the food requirements of Arab and other Moslem armies if they fight a holy war for Jerusalem and all Israeli-occupied territories, the English-language paper Arab News reported Wednesday.

It said Sheikh Hassan Abbas Sharbatli, a former honorary minister of state, was offering his multimillion dollar resources in support of Crown Prince Fahd's call earlier this month for a holy war to secure an independent Palestinian state.

Sheikh Sharbatli already provides about $30,000 a month to help rebels fight Soviet troops in Afghanistan, the News said.

Galilee fired on by PLO

Times News Services

TEL AVIV — Palestinian guerrillas in southern Lebanon fired a volley of Soviet-made Katyusha rockets at Israeli settlements in the northern Galilee panhandle early today, causing minor damage but no casualties, the military command said.

The rocket attack, the second in as many days, came in apparent reprisal for a series of punishing Israeli air and ground attacks on Palestinian guerrilla targets in southern Lebanon.

A spokesman said Israeli settlers, anticipating the guerrilla reprisals, had spent the night in bomb shelters.

When the first salvo of rockets fell Wednesday, Israeli planes streaked across the frontier to attack guerrilla positions in and around the Palestinian-held market town of Nabatiyeh, about eight kilometres northwest of the border. Witnesses reported heavy guerrilla and civilian casualties, but no figures were given.

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret, divorcee sister of the Queen and the most controversial member of the Royal Family, is 50 today, and an official birthday picture shows her looking light years different from the dumpy, double-chinned figure of two years ago.

"The new Margaret is a wow," says photographer Arthur Edwards of the tabloid Sun.

Sun columnist Judy Wade reckons Margaret lost 28 pounds during the last six months and says her rose-petal complexion "is so wrinkle-free that more than one titled lady is willing to bet her best tiara that a few tucks have been taken up under the royal hairline."

Nigel Dempster of The Daily Mail, ace of the London gossip columnists, reports that Margaret's seven-year friendship with Roddy Llewellyn, 17 years her junior, is cooling off.

Llewellyn is not with Margaret for her birthday celebration at Balmoral Castle in Scotland, he says.

Margaret has fascinated the tabloids for years, starting in her mid-20s when the beautiful, vivacious princess fell in love with RAF Group Capt. Peter Townsend, a dashing Battle of Britain hero.

She bowed to family and church pressures and gave him up because he had been divorced.

Her spectacular wedding to handsome jet-set photographer Tony Armstrong-Jones after a secret love affair took place in Westminster Abbey May 6, 1960.

The marriage ended in divorce May 24, 1978. Armstrong-Jones, who was made the Earl of Snowdon after they married, now has remarried.

The couple's two children, Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, 16, and Viscount Linley, 18, are with their mother at Balmoral.

Smear-Christian drive alleged

The Associated Press

An exiled Iranian Anglican bishop said Wednesday two of his fellow church leaders have been arrested in Tehran as part of a campaign by the revolutionary Islamic government to "discredit Christianity."

The Rt. Rev. Hassan Dehqani-Tafti said from his self-imposed London exile that Iranian authorities arrested the Rev. Iraj Mottahedeh, senior priest in charge of the Anglican Church in the central Iranian city of Isfahan, and Dimitri Bellos, lay administrator of the Anglican diocese in Iran. He said both men were detained Aug. 8 on undisclosed charges.

Several religious leaders, including Pope John Paul II, have expressed concern about the treatment of religious minorities under the fundamentalist Islamic regime of Ayatollah Khomeini.

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, meanwhile, formally appointed Mohammad Ali Rajai as prime minister Wednesday, the official Pars news agency reported.

Rajai, who was approved by the Parliament last week, has been quoted as saying he will name a cabinet this weekend, clearing the way for formal debate over the fate of the 52 American hostages. No date has been set for the debate, however, and Iran has given no assurances that the issue will be taken up soon.

The hostages spent their 291st day in captivity Wednesday.

In another development, Tehran Radio reported Wednesday that Iran informed the Soviet charge d'affaires in Tehran it had closed the Soviet consulate in the central Iranian city of Isfahan.

Iranian officials are upset over alleged Soviet interference in Iranian affairs and the inability to come to terms over the sale of Iranian natural gas to the Russians. They have been demanding the Soviet Union cut back on its diplomatic staff in Iran.

And in Berkeley, Calif., a group calling itself the Iran Liberation Army claimed responsibility for two bombs that exploded at a meeting of Iranians at a Berkeley school, showering a hallway with metal fragments, authorities said today.

One man suffered minor injuries in the initial blast at the west campus of Berkeley High School on Wednesday night. The explosion occurred as police were evacuating about 500 students and their families. Police had received two calls warning that bombs were set to go off.

Police information officer Andy Goodman said both callers used the name of the liberation army. He said police had no knowledge of any such group.

Goodman said almost all those present were Iranians. The gathering was sponsored by the International Students Association with Iranian students presenting folk songs and dances, a student spokesman said.

Playboy profits record $13M

CHICAGO (Reuter) — Hugh Hefner's international Playboy empire Wednesday reported a record profit of $13.078 million but a dip in earnings from gambling casinos in London in the last financial year.

Playboy Enterprises announced that its over-all profit was up 44 per cent for the year ended June 30.

A joint statement by Hefner, the company chairman, and president Derick Daniels said Playboy magazine and Playboy casinos in Britain are the largest contributors.

ARE YOU LONELY, DEpressed, can't think straight, life in doldrums, troubled or financial problems? Jesus Christ is the answer. As He said in His own words, "if you ask me to come into your heart and ask for ANYTHING, it will be done". So why don't you just try it, after all what have you got to loose? Maybe I don't, but God still loves you. To me, it's worth paying for this ad.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Sleep on dear good mother,
long years

Since you left
filled with sadness and tears

Yours was a heart
and gay

Scattering sunshine

You know how we love you and, yes,
love you yet

Though God took
we cannot forget.

Smuggled gas stove may have caused jet fire

RIYADH (AP) — A fire that killed all 301 people aboard a Saudi Arabian jetliner may have been caused by a small bottled-gas stove smuggled aboard by a pilgrim to Mecca.

The Saudi Civil Aviation Authority said investigators found two butane gas stoves in the burned-out wreckage of the Lockheed TriStar jetliner, one in the middle of the passenger compartment and another at the rear.

A fire extinguisher found near one of them had apparently been used, said a statement by the authority.

"Regrettably, it is customary that some pilgrims do smuggle such items aboard despite regulations forbidding it," it said.

It said the TriStar's three engines were intact and its fuel tanks did not catch fire.

The pilot reported the fire a few minutes after he took off Tuesday night for the Saudi Red Sea port of Jidda, 800 kilometres to the west, on a flight from Karachi, Pakistan.

He turned back, landed at the Riyadh airport and told the control tower that he was trying to get the passengers out through the emergency exits; then radio contact was broken and the plane was engulfed in flames, the authority said.

Its statement said a recording of the radio traffic reported the fire began in the middle of the passenger compartment and spread to the rear and front.

Most of the bodies were found near emergency exits, indicating a panicky rush that jammed the aisle and may have prevented the crew from opening the doors, the communique said.

The authority said the passengers included 82 Moslems from Pakistan on a pilgrimage to Mecca, the birthplace of the prophet Mohammed near Jidda; 32 Iranian pilgrims who boarded in Riyadh, scores of Saudis and passengers of other nationalities.

There were 16 crew members board.

The toll was the third largest in aviation history, exceeded by the 582 who died in March, 1977, when Pan American and KLM Boeing 747s collided on a runway in the Canary Islands and 346 in March, 1974, when a Turkish DC-10 crashed northeast of Paris.

Birth defects from herbicide

REGINA (CP) — The agricultural herbicide TOK, used on Canadian canola and vegetable crops during the last crop year, has been pulled off the market because of its potency in causing birth defects.

Rohm and Hass, which markets the herbicide in Canada, agreed to pull the chemical off the market voluntarily last fall but obtained federal permission to sell its remaining stock.

Jack Elliott, marketing manager for Rohm and Haas, said the company brought the question of possible side-effects from the herbicide to the federal government's attention.

And, the Environmental Protection Agency in the United States is expected to move to ban use of the chemical, also known as nitrofen and niclofen, in about two weeks, said an official in Washington, D.C., who asked not to be named. Evidence of the potency of TOK in causing birth defects led California to put severe restrictions on its use.

West Virginia awash

KENNA, W.Va. (AP) — Floods built in renewed downpours surged through numerous areas of West Virginia today, washing away homes and businesses and forcing the evacuation of several communities and at least one hospital.

Power was disrupted, landslides and rising waters closed highways, and evacuations were under way in Jackson, Kanawha, Raleigh, Putnam and Webster counties, authorities said.

Gov. Jay Rockefeller, who has already asked for a federal disaster declaration for 15 northern counties flooded earlier this week, was receiving regular reports this morning from the state's Emergency Services Office.

There were no immediate reports of injuries but authorities said hundreds of residents were forced to flee low-lying areas.

Heaviest rainfall was reported in Webster County, where almost 21 centimetres had fallen since Tuesday.

garden notes

In my current series on the creation of a new lawn, its care and maintenance, we have reached the point where the seed has actually been placeed on the waiting seedbed and the next step is to apply a good starter fertilizer. This can also be done before the seeding itself if you prefer.

Look for a fertilizer high in phosphorus, essential for good root development. You'll also need a good amount of nitrogen so look for a fertilizer high in the first two numbers, the first being nitrogen and the second phosphorus. And follow label directions carefully because they've written that way for good reasons.

Once both fertilizer and seed are spread, rake them lightly in. Then give a second light raking at right angles to the first and pass the roller you've borrowed or rented over the sown site.

Your seed bed must be kept uniformly moist throughout its germination period. Apply as gentle a spray as possible when it is necessary to water. Mowing can be started as soon as there is growth enough to cut. Set your mower high, between 1½ and two inches, and mow when the soil surface is fairly dry. Mow often, and high, to reduce weeds.

Given enough sunlight and a good feeding program, it is possible to grow lawn turf successfully even under quite adverse conditions. Just recently, I saw examples of beautiful turf growing in rather bizarre conditions — one was a lovely turf covering the roof of a house and the other was turf laid on a bed of concrete which has been thriving for a dozen years.

Of course, lawns grown with such limited root area require special feeding and watering programs, with special attention to disease control, especially in warm weather. But it does show that just about any lawn can be kept in top shape with a bit of planning.

And so a word on lawn fertilizers. On every package of fertilizer you will see three numbers. The first number gives the percentage by weight of nitrogen, the second number gives the percentage of phosphorus in the package and the third number the percentage of potash.

Let's take an example. A fertilizer labelled 36-4-4 would give you nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium in a ratio of nine to one. The package contents would deliver 36 per cent of the package weight of nitrogen, four per cent of phosphorus and four per cent of potash.

Now it's obvious that 36 plus four plus four does not add up to 100 per cent. Why not? One reason can be that the fertilizer particles may be held in some sort of filler like puffed vermiculite. Another reason is that other organic compounds are bound to be present from which the nitrogen, phosphorus and potash for our plants and lawns are drawn. These nutrient elements are drawn from a chain of compounds whose extra molecules account for the other 56 per cent in this case.

Let's say your bag of fertilizer weighs 14 pounds. It is 36 per cent nitrogen. Multiply those two figures; that is, take 36 per cent of 14 pounds and you know that the whole bag of fertilizer contains about five pounds of nitrogen, enough to cover 5,000 square feet of lawn, since a good feeding for an established lawn is given with a coverage of one pound of nitrogen per 1,000 square feet.

The numbers given you the quantity of nutrients, they don't give you the quanlity. And so when you are buying a lawn fertilizer, I would give the same advice as for the purchase of grass seed: go to the most reputable garden supply shop you know and buy best they offer.

If you take the time to read the label carefully, you will often find that the more expensive fertilizers are higher in density and give greater coverage and so do not end up being that much more expensive at all.

Another consideration is that the cheapest fertilizers simply mix up the nitrogen particles with phosphorus and potash particles and throw in some inert filler or distributing agent. The trouble with this simple method is that the different nutrients tend to separate out and so when they go on your lawn, all areas will not be equally fed. More expensive but also more efficient are fertilizers in which each particle contains the desired ratio of the three major nutrients. More tomorrow.

U.S. hikes tariffs on trucks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sharply higher U.S. import duties on small trucks went into effect today, a day after a federal judge ruled against efforts to temporarily delay the tariff. The new charge could add up to $1,000 to the price of the vehicles if the extra cost is passed on to buyers.

The old four per cent duty on the cab-chassis of imported mini pickups increases to 25 per cent, the U.S. Customs Service said.

Customs first proposed the tariff boost in May, arguing that it would close a loophole that allowed foreign automakers to ship cab-chassis units to the United States and then attach them to truck beds, thus qualifying for the low four-per-cent duty.

Until today, only completed trucks were taxed at the full 25 per cent.

A lawsuit filed by Thompson Toyota Inc., of Redwood City, Calif., seeking a restraining order, was dismissed by U.S. District Judge June Green on Wednesday on grounds that Thompson Toyota failed to show "irreparable damage" from the higher duty.

General Motors, Chrysler Corp., and the Ford Motor Co. all import these trucks from their Japanese affiliates.

Sport youth loved brought his death

CAMP SPRINGS, Md. (AP) — Eight-year-old Kwame Kyler had a bad heart, but he wanted to play football and his parents let him. In the end, the sport he loved brought his death.

"Kwame lived a happy life and, if he had to die anyway, we're glad it could be this way, where he was happy," said his father.

Kwame collapsed while catching passes with about two dozen other boys and girls during football practice in this Washington suburb Monday. He died about 90 minutes later.

"We're not blaming anyone," said Phillip Kyler, the boy's father, an operator on the Metro subway system.

"He just wanted to be the best at everything," added Geraldine Kyler, the child's mother. "All his life it seemed he was trying to make up for how much his heart problem held him back.

"He was a football fanatic. He told me just the other day, 'I don't want to sit on the sidelines like I did last year.'"

The couple has one other child, a five-year-old daughter.

Kwame had to watch his friends play last season in the Camp Springs Boys and Girls Club league because of a heart condition with which he was born.

The disease, in which two main heart arteries are tangled around each other, usually kills its victims before they reach their teens. Kwame underwent open-heart surgery when he was one-year-old and had lived a near-normal life.

When a doctor said after giving him a stress test last May that Kwame could safely play football, his parents decided to let him go ahead.

"We had a lot of faith in God," said Mrs. Kyler. Unlike 95 per cent of the children who undergo the operation, Kwame had required neither medication nor hospitalization.

"We're not angry at the doctors," she continued. "We're deeply grateful.

"Without them, Kwame never would have had the life he did."

Practice began Saturday, with team members issued maroon-and-gold jerseys. Kwame was still wearing his at 11:30 that night, his mother said.

On Monday, Kwame played football with friends at his house, then went to practice. Dressed in street clothes, he joined his team-mates for push-ups and leg lifts, then ran a lap of the field and got into one of two lines for pass-catching drills.

A friend said Kwame's line was too long and the coach asked him to switch. As Kwame walked from one line to the other, he fell down, clutching his chest. When the coach asked Kwame what was wrong, the boy opened his mouth but could not speak.

Kwame was rushed by police to Malcolm Grow Hospital at nearby Andrews Air Force Base, where he was pronounced dead at 6:52 p.m.

Mrs. Kyler said she had not talked with team's coach about Kwame's condition, "but I was afraid if I told him, (he) will say Kwame couldn't play even though the doctor had said it was OK.

Close up on one of life's material pleasures

Now it's not just the man, but the woman in the grey flannel suit who'll be climbing the corporate ladder in style. Because flannel is the success story for Fall '80. Soft, sophisticated and very suitable for the new soft suiting we'll be seeing more and more of. Jackets are easier — with gently rounded shoulders and small, flat lapels. Pants and skirts are softened with pleats or tucks. And flannel's the fabric that makes it all work. Which just goes to show — anything man can do, woman can do better.

The flannel suits shown here in wool/nylon are just some of the material pleasures of flannel waiting for you at Eaton's. Double breasted pant suit in grey or navy. 135.00. Shorter blazer skirt suit in grey, plum, navy, camel or black. 125.00. Both by Coincidence, for sizes 5-13.

Never asked brother to help Libya, says Billy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Billy Carter testified today that he told Libyans from the start of his dealings with them that he had no influence on U.S. policy and said he never asked his brother, the president of the United States, to do anything for Libya.

"Furthermore, the Libyans have not asked me to ask anything of the president or of any representative of the U.S. government," Carter told a special Senate judiciary investigating subcommittee.

"I never asked my brother to do anything for the benefit of Libya. I also know that he would not do it even if I had been foolish enough to try, which I wasn't."

Billy Carter also testified that the president never passed any inside information to him, and said he was not tipped off that U.S. intelligence had learned he had received $220,000 from Libya.

The president's brother insisted the $220,000 was part of a $500,000 loan from Libya, and not a foreign agents' fee.

The justice department concluded it was a fee, not a loan, and required Carter to register as a foreign agent for Libya. And Senator Birch Bayh, chairman of the subcommittee, said testimony Wednesday raises "a possibility" that the money indeed was a fee.

Billy Carter said there has been much public attention about what he did with that money. "Quite simply, I used the money to pay my bills and to repay other loans," he said.

In an opening statement, the president's brother appealed to the investigating senators and a national public TV audience not to prejudge his character.

"I hope this testimony will show in common-sense fashion that Billy Carter is not a buffoon, a boob or a wacko as some public figures have so described him," he said of himself. "I am a common citizen with uncommon financial and family problems."

The Senate investigators still want to know whether Billy asked the White House about the C-130 cargo planes Libya bought but President Carter's administration won't release because Libya supports international terrorists.

The testimony Wednesday came from a financial consultant who said Billy Carter instructed him to press Libya for payment of a $500,000 loan after Carter had already received the $220,000.

The consultant, Ronald C. Sprague, testified that he assumes the $220,000 was part of the $500,000 loan but said.

He told the senators that when he learned of the $220,000 for the first time from a newspaper story, "I was as surprised as you are."

Brinks robber generous

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The FBI says a fugitive Brinks guard wanted for making off with $1.85 million — apparently in another attempt to distribute the loot — mailed $10,000 to an SPCA official who fired him in 1977.

"I appreciate his intent, but I wish it had come under different circumstaces," Richard Avanzino, the local SPCA general manager said.

This was the second gesture of generosity by Brinks, Inc. guard and San Francisco special policeman George M. Bosque, 25, the FBI says. On Saturday an acquaintance of his received $20,000 to repay a business debt.

Bosque allegedly stole a Brinks truck at San Francisco International Airport Friday, commandeered an auto in the parking lot of a nearby hotel and fled with the money flown from two Hawaiian banks.

Bosque's last known address was Daly City.

'Mad bomber' blasts police

VANCOUVER (CP) — A projectile was fired through the front door of city police headquarters early today and exploded in a hail of metal fragments.

No one was hurt and there was no damage, but soon after the blast, a man telephoned, identified himself as the Mad Bomber, and said: "That's just a sample of what you can expect to get in October."

Police S.Sgt. Don Paradon said the significance of the reference to October was not apparent.

Forensic scientists collected the remains of the bomb, which Paradon said hurtled through the open door with a "loud whooshing noise" at 1:10 a.m.

"There was a tail of fire behind it," Paradon said, "which indicates it was a projectile, rather than something thrown."

Seven police officers and a civilian at the front desk dove for cover. The device went off in a sheet of flame and smoke, and there was a strong smell of gunpowder.

In addition to the jagged pieces of metal scattered around the office, police were analysing a chalky material found on the floor.

Pay fines . . . or else

Gov't getting tough with those who default

The provincial government — out as much as $10 million because thousands of court fines aren't paid — is about to get tough with offenders.

The crackdown will see the government use a computer and tracing service to nail what are known as "scofflaws", the people who simply ignore court orders or who skip without paying.

Government sources say the problem has existed unchecked for six years, with some officials estimating the amount owed Victoria could be as high as $10 million — most of it in small amounts of from $35 to $450.

The measures will deal with fines for motor vehicles violations or hunting offences, but not municipal offences such as parking violations.

Senior government officials say the situation dates to 1974 when the then NDP government amended the Summary Convictions Act and removed judges' powers to impose jail sentences in non-criminal cases for persons who defaulted on a court-imposed fine.

Since then an estimated 20 per cent of the 50,000 people fined each year have failed to pay their fines. Civil action against a person who doesn't pay is time-consuming, expensive and cumbersome.

Officials in the court services branch of the attorney-general's ministry say they have lists in the more than 80 regional offices and now are making a master sheet of all who owe money.

One senior official said the crackdown will cover everyone.

"We are not going to let anyone off," he said, adding there is no statute of limitations on outstanding fines.

Under the crackdown, the court services division has started a tracing service in Vancouver that will track down and collect from those who have failed to pay.

The official explained that with the default system removed, there are four options open to the government for collecting the fines.

The government can garnishee wages, bring the individual back before a judge, execute against an individual's goods or register a lien if the party owns land.

"We only decide to write off the fine as a loss after extremely careful consideration and when it is obviously apparent that we can never collect."

Attorney-General Allan Williams said collecting the fines is an extremely difficult problem but must be done otherwise the court procedure becomes meaningless.

"There is not much point in escalating fines if no steps are taken to recover them," he said.

N-sub afire

TOKYO (AP) — A Soviet nuclear submarine caught fire in international waters off Okinawa today and at least nine crew members were killed and three injured, the Japanese Maritime Safety Agency reported.

It warned ships and aircraft to stay clear of the area because of possible radioactive contamination, but first reports, from a patrol plane dispatched to the scene 70 nautical miles east of Okinawa, said no sign of radiation was found.

The fire occurred just before dawn. The submarine had radioed for help but the crew apparently was able to get the situation under control fairly quickly.

As the damaged submarine lay virtually dead in the water, in calm seas, a Soviet ship arrived in response to an earlier call for assistance. The vessel, identified as the training ship Meridian, took about 20 crew members off the sub.

Dissidents jailed as strike spreads

Times News Services

GDANSK — Authorities arrested 16 leading dissidents in a crackdown aimed at ending Poland's mass strike, but the labor ferment was reported spreading as the nation's worst crisis in 10 years entered its second week.

Nearly every factory in this central Baltic coast region was shut today and there were major disruptions in Szczecin, a port and industrial city of 400,000 on the East German border.

Far south in Pope John Paul II's hometown of Krakow, 24 departments of the Lenin Steel Plant were were reported struck.

(The Pope, breaking his silence on the labor unrest troubling his Polish homeland, told Vatican pilgrims Wednesday: "We here in Rome are united with our fellow Poles."

(And Roman Catholic Bishop Lech Kaczmarczyk of Gdansk has sent medals bearing the Pope's image to each of the 15 members of the strike committee presidium, or executive board.)

Several factories and the urban transport system were also reported shut down in Elbarg, about 64 kilometres east of Gdansk, and dissident sources reported a strike against a liquefed national gas transportation facility in the city of Lomza in northeastern Poland.

There were also reports that Warsaw, the nation's capital, may be hit with a general walkout.

Some 150,000 workers were off the job in the Gdansk area and 30,000 in Szczezin.

In Chicago, Thomas Gleason, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, said Wednesday his union's 110,000 dockworkers will launch a countrywide boycott of Polish goods today or Friday in support of the Polish workers.

The strike wave began last Thursday in Gdansk (formerly called Danzig) with workers demanding higher pay to offset in-

Paneful discovery . . . 12,056 pains

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Everything was going well at the construction site of the Lutheran Brotherhood's 17-storey office building in Minneapolis until an errant computer in New York served up 12,056 glass windows — all the wrong size.

Three sides of the $30 million office building are to be covered with the copper-toned glass panes. But not those that were shipped by Pittsburgh Plate Glass.

Each of the newly arrived glass panels is 3 inches too long. And, because they are made from a tempered mold, they cannot be cut, officials said.

Frank Pallilo, whose Glen Cove, N.Y., manufacturing firm subcontracted for the glass work and manufactured the frames, said the windows will have to be scrapped and new panels will have to be made in Pittsburgh.

A spokesman for Lutheran Brotherhood, a fraternal insurance society, said he presumes Pittsburgh Plate Glass will have to pay for the miscalculation. He does not know how much the error cost.

"Everything was coming in pretty well," he said. "We're waiting to find out what's going to happen."

He blamed the foul-up on a computer error.

Appeal court ruling backs law society advertising ban

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Law Society of B.C. may prohibit advertising by lawyers and discipline those who ignore its rulings, B.C. Court of Appeal ruled Wednesday.

In a unanimous decision, the court overturned earlier B.C. Supreme Court rulings which held that law society benchers were wrong in disciplining North Vancouver lawyer Don Jabour, who advertised a legal clinic in January, 1978.

The discipline committee recommended a six-month suspension for Jabour but the suspension was held in abeyance pending outcome of the appeal.

Jabour also challenged the society's advertising ban on grounds it was contrary to the federal Combines Investigation Act, which prohibits restraint of competition, and that it violated the fundamental right to freedom of speech.

In reasons written by Appeal Court Justice Peter Seaton, and concurred with by Justices J. D. Lambert and H. E. Hutcheon, it was held Wednesday that the benchers — governing body of the B.C. Law Society — have the power to prohibit the type of advertising Jabour was using and to discipline members for such advertising.

The earlier B.C. Supreme Court ruling held that the benchers were authorized to regulate advertising but not prohibit it. But Mr. Justice Seaton said he could see nothing in the Legal Professions Act to justify this conclusion.

Soon after Jabour challenged the advertising rules, the combines investigation branch began an inquiry in which it was suggested the law society had committed a criminal offence under Section 32 of the Combines Investigation Act by agreeing or arranging to lessen competition unduly in the supply of legal services.

Seaton said he was not convinced Parliament intended the act to cover governing bodies of professions.

"I reject the concept that to perform an act which the legislature is empowered to authorize, and has authorized, has been made a crime."

Regarding Jabour's claim that his freedom of speech was being violated, Seaton said the speech concerned is commercial advertising, and the question was: Has the legislature validly bestowed on the benchers the power to ban that type of speech while there is a presumption in the Bill of Rights unlimiting freedom of speech?

"I think it has," the judge said, noting free speech is qualified by laws such as those against defamation.

Tanker hits oil rig

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A 172-metre tanker carrying more than 2.5 million gallons of oil and gas slammed into a towering drilling rig under construction in the Gulf of Mexico today and burst into flames.

Texaco Oil Co. said the cargo was on fire, and the U.S. Coast Guard said there was a possibility the ship would explode.

More than five hours after the fire began, the coast guard said the fire was spreading.

"The intensity of the fire on the ship has increased. Flames are shooting up 50 to 70 metres," said Coast Guard spokesman Tom Pearson.

"The possibility of an explosion has increased since the cargo appears to have caught fire . . . The helicopter says the fire has gone from the bow back to amidships. She is burning to the water line," he said.

All 39 crew members were rescued from the ship by an oilfield barge passing nearby in the water, which is dotted with rigs and platforms.

Help line abuse to be studied

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy has defended the actions of her ministry in an investigation into an alleged case of child abuse which turned out to be without foundation.

The minister, however, said she has requested her senior officials to investigate the possibility of amending legislation so that persons wrongly accused of child abuse may have some legal protection.

The request came after the Times published a story Monday about a Victoria-area couple — identified only by the pseudonym Smith — who claimed they were subjected to a lengthy and embarrassing investigation after someone reported they were abusing their two children.

McCarthy said in the legislature Tuesday there were adequate grounds for carrying out the investigation.

And she defended the social worker's actions.

The minister said social workers assigned to such cases are selected for their experience, ability and discretion.

The minister said it is imperative to check out all reports of abuse and cited a tragic case a couple of years ago of a child in New Westminster who died as a result of abusive treatment.

McCarthy said the complainant in the Smith's case did leave a name and that gave the report an even greater credibility.

The Help Line for Children which the province set up last fall, the first of its kind in Canada, was created to prevent incidents like the one in New Westminster, from ever happening again, McCarthy said.

She said persons reporting abuse may remain anonymous.

"We don't insist on getting names because if we did we may not get a real child abuse call."

She said the name of the informant can never be released because all reports are strictly confidential.

McCarthy said she was deeply concerned about the press article and said she feared it might lead the

NDP wants Eckhardt probe

Attorney-General Allan Williams is in jeopardy of losing his credibility and should establish a judicial inquiry into allegations surrounding the Eckardt report on B.C. electoral boundaries, NDP leader Dave Barrett said Wednesday.

Barrett, who called for emergency debate on the matter in the house, said there is no doubt that either the attorney-general was misled or is misreading the information in front of him.

Speaker Walter Davidson ruled against Barrett's motion on technical grounds.

A report to Williams three weeks ago by deputy attorney-general Dick Vogel cleared deputy premier Grace McCarthy of allegations she interfered in the drafting of former judge Larry Eckardt's 1978 report on electoral boundaries which added a pocket of Social Credit support to the Mrs. McCarthy's Vancouver-Little Mountain riding.

The investigation was started after commission secretary Florence Tamoto said in an affidavit that commission counsel Susan Thompson told her Mrs. McCarthy interfered in the commission's work. Thompson denied the allegation.

This latest effort by the NDP for a full public inquiry followed a newspaper article in which Vi Barton, a former Eckart commission staff member, said she felt she was being made out to be a liar.

Barton's evidence — contained in a transcript of her interview with a member of the attorney-general's staff — indicated she too was told by Thompson that "Grace McCarthy got to Judge Eckardt."

That and other points raised by Barton about drafting of the electoral boundaries report, including an allegation that Dan Campbell, a former adviser to Premier Bill Bennett, instructed a commission member to fly to Victoria from Vancouver and pick up a brown enve-

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Investor enthusiasm for oil, high-technology and precious metals issues continued to overshadow concerns over rising interest rates and pushed the stock market higher for the second straight day.

The gains followed Wednesday's 5.46-point recovery from a near-27-point loss earlier in the week amid interest-rate worries sparked by a record weekly money supply gain.

The worries returned today, however, after dealers began speculating that the Federal Reserve Board was starting a credit-tightening maneuver.

Phillips Petroleum led the NYSE most-actives, up ½ to $40¾, while Mobil was ahead ⅜ to $72⅜ and Tesoro Petroleum was up 2⅜ to $30. Texaco, which announced an oil find in the German North Sea, was off ⅛ to $37⅛.

Domestic oil producers have gained ground following reports Saudi Arabia is considering an oil production cutback.

Computer issues were higher, continuing Wednesday's strong gains. International Business Machines rose ¼ to $67⅛ and Texas Instruments limbed 1¾ to $121¾.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market was firm at the close of quiet trading.

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 497.9, up 6.2.

Equities and golds advanced.

Cattle

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. at the Calgary public stockyards consisted of 1,000 head. They consisted of a heavy run of slaughter heifers, a moderate run of slaughter steers and a light supplies of good-conditioned D1-2 cows.

Trade was active on all classes with a broad local demand.

A1-2 slaughter steers traded steady. Slaughter heifers sold steady with sales on one load at $76.40.

A-12 steers over a 1,000 lbs. $77-79 ; A-1-2 under 1,000 lbs. 75.50-77.50.
